The Śākta Pīṭhas by Dr. D. C. Sircar, which is limited and precise in scope but has a wide appeal, brings honour to the young historian of Calcutta. Its basis is a critical edition of the Pīṭhanirṇaya or Mahāpīṭhanirūpaṇa which is a short treatise of the late period describing the fiftyone pilgrim spots associated with the Mother Goddess under some of her various names. Each one of the pīṭhas is mentioned along with a particular form of the Goddess and that of Śiva associated with it.

The said text passes as a chapter of the Tantra-cūḍāmaṇi and resembles some others, so that a plausible edition, based on six manuscripts and four source materials which Dr. Sircar's diligence has succeeded in grouping together, was philologically realisable. The editor adds a reconstructed text, based mainly on a Bengali version, and furnishes other useful matters in appendices one of them containing an index of the pīṭhas with necessary identifications of the localities.

But what doubtless deserves much more attention is the erudite study in the introduction, wherein the author recapitulates what is known or may be presumed about the problem of the pīṭhas. Leaving aside minor indications, the legend which seeks to explain the origin of the pīṭhas is the well-known epico-purāṇic account of Dakṣa's sacrifice, interrupted by Śiva's wrath. The story seems to have developed out of certain allusions in the Brāhmaṇas referring to the peculiar misfortunes of Bhaga and Pūsan. In the later Purāṇas and the Purāṇa-type Tantras, the image of Viṣṇu cutting off, part by part, Satī's corpse borne on Śiva's shoulder has been grafted on this legend.

The severed parts of Satī's body fell on the earth and each formed a pīṭha, a cult having come to be crystallised on it. Dr. Sircar recalls in this connection the Buddhist legends about the Buddha's relics and the more distant Greek version of the Osiris myth. We see here, once again, that a cult, quite well localised geographically, develops on absolutely mythical conceptions.

Certain pīṭhas appear to be associated more especially with the breasts and the female organ of the Goddess, probably analogous to the conception of the phallic emblem of Śiva. Whatever that may be, the religious crystallisation seems to have taken place originally on the basis of a group of 4 pīṭhas at a time which, according to Dr. Sircar, may coincide with the appearance of the early Tantras. These 4 pīṭhas are supposed to represent the four cardinal points though, from the beginning, the region of Kāmarūpa (Assam) enjoyed a privileged position in the scheme Gradually there appeared 7 pīṭhas, then 10, then 18 (a sanctified number), ultimately (through the intermediate numbers 42, 50 and 51) as many as 108 (an equally expected number). The Pīṭhanirṇaya is based on a list of 42, which was later enlarged by the inclusion of the 10 mahāvidyās of Kāmarūpa, the counterpart of the 10 avatāras of the Visnuite cycle

In an appendix, Dr. Sircar discusses the evidence for determining the date of the celebrated encyclopaedic treatise Tantrasāra (first half of the 17th century). Another appendix, the scope of which is more general than novel, deals with the development of the Śakti cult from Vedic times going as far back as the Mohen-jo-daro motifs, the interpretation of which is, however, not quite decisive. PREFACE.

Tantric studies have not much progressed in India. The author of the present monograph originally approached the Tantra literature as a student of ancient and medieval Indian geography, although the subject under discussion in the following pages soon proved to be equally interesting from the viewpoint of the religious life of India. A Tantra text on the Śākta Pīṭhas, entitled Pīṭhanirnaya or Mahāpīṭhanirūpana, has been edited here with notes and an attempt has been made in that connection to trace the history of the Piṭha conception with reference not only to the Puranic legend in theoretical explanation of the origin of the Pīthas but also to the real basis of the conception itself. No less than six manuscripts and four published sources have been utilized in editing the Pīṭhanirṇaya (Mahāpīṭhanirūpaṇa). A reconstructed text of the original work has been given in an Appendix, while a large number of relevant texts has been quoted either in the notes or in the Appendixes. The author has also discussed, however summarily, the location of several hundreds of tīrthas or holy places, mentioned in various works as Pīthas. Much, unfortunately, still remains to be done in this direction. Any suggestion from the readers for the improvement of the work will be carefully considered and gratefully acknowledged.

The author is extremely thankful to Prof. H. C. Raychaudhuri and Dr. J. N. Banerjea of the Calcutta University, who have taken interest in the preparation of the monograph and have offered some valuable suggestions. His thanks are also due to Drs. R. C. Majumdar, I. B. Banerji and B. K. Ghosh for some help and suggestions. Mr. S. K. Saraswati has laid the author under a debt of gratitude by lending him a valuable manuscript (MS. G) of the Pīṭhanirṇaya from his own collection. As, however, the manuscript was received after the monograph had been ready for the press, it has been utilized mainly in the notes on the text and in reconstructing the probable original text of the work for Appendix I–A.

Finally, the author thanks the authorities and management of the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengal and the Baptist Mission Press, Calcutta.

The Pīṭhanirṇaya or Mahāpīṭhanirūpaṇa.

There are three manuscripts of a very small work entitled Pīṭhanirnaya or Mahāpīṭhanirūpaṇa (Nos. 196, 3400 and 5303) in the Government Collection of the library of the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengal. The work describes the fifty-one Pīthas (literally, altars or seats)[1] or places of pilgrimage, considered to be the favourite resorts of the mother-goddess who is variously known as Devī, Śakti, Durgā, Pārvatī, Umā, Ambikā, Aparṇā, Kālī, Gaurī, etc, and is represented in Indian mythology as the wife of the great god Śiva.[2] The Pīṭhas are mentioned together with the names of particular forms of the Devī and of the accompanying Bhairava (form of Śiva) associated with each of them. It is admitted in the text that it forms a section of a Tantra work entitled Tantracūḍāmaṇi. Such works as the Śabdakalpadruma (1822–52) and the Prāṇatoṣaṇī Tantra (1820), which quote the same text of the descriptive list of fifty-one Pīthas, also ascribe it to the Tantracūḍāmaṇi. The Bengali poem Annadāmaṅgala (1752) by Bhāratacandra refers its section on the 'fifty-one' Pīthas, although it actually mentions only forty-two names of holy places and does not

[1] In early times altars (pīthas) appear to have been used as objects of aniconic worship. Sacred spots where particular Yogins or ascetics meditated and succeeded in attaining to siddhi or perfection are regarded as Pītha or Siddhapītha. The Sarvānandataraṅgiṇī refers to Mehāra, a Parganā in the Tippera District, as a Pītha-sthala, because Sarvānanda attained his Tantric siddhi there.

[2] The different names of the mother-goddess appear to have originally indicated different tribal deities who were afterwards identified with the wife of Śiva-Paśupati (Vedic Rudra), a pre-Aryan god, known to have been worshipped by the Mohenjodaro people. Devī means the 'goddess par excellence'. Śakti (force) and Ādyā Śakti (the primeval force) indicate the power underlying creation and the controlling energy responsible for the universal order, the first name being often applied to the energizing power of the different gods. The name Śakti is also applied to the female organ worshipped by the Śāktas (devotees of the mother-goddess) just as the Śaivas adore the Phallus of Śiva, i.e. Śiva in the form of the Phallus; cf. Apte, Sanskrit-English Dictionary, s.v., also yonistotra quoted in Des. Cat. Sans. MSS., R.A.S.B., VIII, p. 806:

भगरूपा जगन्माया (°न्मातः) सृष्टिस्थितिलयान्विता।

दक्षविद्याखरूपात्मा योनिर्मां पातु सर्वदा ॥ See infra, Appendix VI.

The names Durgā and Pārvatī emphasize their relation with inaccessible mountain regions (especially the Himālaya of which the Indian mother-goddess is conceived as a daughter) and suggest that these were originally names of deities worshipped by mountaineers (cf. Śiva's name Giriśa meaning a dweller of the mountains). The names Umā (cf. Ommo on the coins of Huviska) and Ambikā are derived from the Dravidian word amma (mother) in the sense of the universal mother. Aparnā signifies the deity 'who is without her leaf-cloth', i.e naked, nakedness being one of the striking characteristics of the Indian mother-goddess. She must have originally been worshipped by a tribe such as the Nagna-Śabara (the naked Śabaras) of the Bṛihatsamhitā, just as the Buddhist deity Parṇaśabarī was undoubtedly associated with the Parṇa-Śabaras (the leaf-clad Śabaras) of the same work. See J.K.H.R.S., I, pp. 87-88. Kālī or the dark-complexioned deity may have been the goddess of some dark-skinned pre-Dravidian tribe; but the name may not be entirely unconnected with the conception of Kāla (time or death) with which Śiva is identified. Gauri means the white-complexioned goddess and possibly points to her original worship among the Mongoloid xanthoderms of the Himalayan region. The name Mahāmāyā apparently represents the mother-goddess as the spirit guiding the magician priests of primitive peoples. The name was later given a philosophical interpretation. Cf. other names like Yogamāyā. Kātyāyanī, although it may indicate a deified lady or a family or tribal goddess (Aryan ?), means 'a middle-aged widow in red clothes'. Cf. Dāksāyanī, Kauśikī. She is also called the 'maiden', the 'angry' or 'fierce' one and 'death' (Kālanidrā).

follow the order in which the Pīṭhas are mentioned in the list of the Pīṭhanirṇaya, to the Mantracūḍāmaṇi Tantra which would appear to be a mistake for Tantracūḍāmaṇi.[1] The library of the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengal possesses a manuscript of the Tantra text entitled Tantracūḍāmaṇi (No. I, F3); but, although it gives a list of the Pīṭhas (p. 178) in connection with the later form of a Tantric ritual known as Pīṭhanyāsa, that has little to do with the text of the Pīṭhanirnaya. As the Pīṭhanirṇaya or Mahāpīṭhanirūpana, avowedly a part of the Tantracūḍāmaṇi, cannot be traced in the Tantra of this name in the Society's library, one has to suggest alternatively either that there are more than one Tantric text entitled Tantracūḍāmaṇi and the Pīṭhanirnaya belonged to a different work of this name, or that the ascription of the Pīṭhanirṇaya to the Tantracūḍāmaṇi, although it is supported by various sources, is without any real foundation. It is, however, very probable that the author of the Pīṭhanirṇaya wanted to credit his small work with a stamp of authority by falsely claiming it to be a part of an earlier Tantra entitled Tantracūḍāmaṇi mentioned in the encyclopedia of Tantric knowledge known as the Tantrasāra (pp. 515, 948). This is possibly suggested by the uncertainty felt by some writers about the name of the source of the Pīṭhanirnaya, variously given as the Tantracūḍāmaṇi, Mantracūḍāmaṇi, Candracūḍāmaṇi, Bhāvacūḍāmaṇi and Pīṭhamālā (vide infra, pp. 42, note 2; 58, note 10).

Date of its Composition.

The text of the Pīṭhanirṇaya or Mahāpīṭhanirūpaṇa, which is silent as to the date of its composition, seems to have been prepared in the late medieval period. The number of the recognized Pīṭhas given as fifty-one probably points to the seventeenth or the eighteenth century (vide infra, pp. 23-24). But the problem of its date is involved in a bigger question

[1] Cf. Vaṅgavāsī ed., p. 42: আমি কহি মন্ত্রচূড়ামণিতন্ত্র মত। A few manuscripts of the work in question read Bhāvacūḍāmaṇi or Candracūḍāmaṇi in place of Tantracūḍāmaṇi. The Rājamālā (a Bengali chronicle of the kings of Tipperah), Lahara I, ascribed usually to the middle of the fifteenth century, quotes verse 18 of the Pīṭhanirnaya (Mahāpīṭhanirūpana) but refers it to the Pīṭhamālā Tantra which seems to be found in some manuscripts as the name of this small work or that of its source. No such manuscripts are, however, known to us. The Rājamālā says,

দক্ষকন্যা সতী অঙ্গ পতন যেস্থানে।
মহাপীঠনির্ণয় মুনি বলিছে পুরাণে॥
শিববাক্য পীঠমালা তন্ত্রের প্রমাণ।
যেই রাজ্যে যেই অঙ্গ সেই পীঠস্থান॥
যেই রাজ্যে এক দেবী ভৈরব আর জন।
দুই নামে পীঠস্থান করে নিরূপণ॥
সতীর দক্ষিণ পদ পড়ে ত্রিপুরাতে।
ত্রিপুরাসুন্দরী খ্যাতি ত্রিপুর ভূমিতে॥
ত্রিপুরেশ নামে শিব ত্রিপুরা রাজ্যেতে।

It will be clear from our discussion on the text of the Pīṭhanirnaya (vide infra) that the above passage of the Rājamālā could have been written only after the middle of the eighteenth century. It cannot be assigned to the fifteenth century as it follows interpolations in a work written not much earlier than the beginning of the eighteenth century

Bhāratacandra's section on the Pīṭhas, styled Pīṭhamālā, may have given rise to the name of an imaginary Pīṭhamālā Tantra.

regarding the origin and evolution of the conception of the Pīṭhas with special reference to their recognized number in different works of various periods.

An Ancient Legend.

There is a legend offering a mythological explanation of the origin of the Pīṭhas. The earlier versions have nothing, however, to do with the Pīṭhas. The germ of the legend can be traced in the Ṛgveda (X, 61, 5–7); but it received its final form in the latest Purāṇas and Tantras assignable to the late-medieval period. The Ṛgvedic tradition about the incestuous relation of a father with his daughter was elaborated in the Brāhmaṇas such as the Śatapatha (Mādhyandina version, I, vii, 4, 1–8; cf. II, i, 2, 9; Kāṇva version, II, vii, 2, 1–8; I, i, 2, 5-6) and Aitareya (III, 33-34); cf. also Tāṇḍyamahābrāhmaṇa, VIII, ii, 10-11.[1] According to the story found in these Brāhmaṇas, once Prajāpati, identified with Yajña or sacrifice, committed incest with his own daughter Dyaus or Ūsas. Disgusted at this vile act of their father, the gods approached Rudra and requested him to pierce Prajāpati with his arrow. Rudra discharged an arrow at Prajāpati whereupon the latter's retas (germinal fluid) fell upon the ground. As Prajāpati represents sacrifice itself and as no part of his body could be thrown away without being utilized in the performance of sacrifice, the gods first took Prajāpati's retas to Bhaga who sits on the southern side of the sacrificial ground. Bhaga looked at the thing and at once his eyes were burned. The gods then took it to Pūṣan who, on tasting it, lost his teeth. The concluding part of the story is unnecessary for our purpose. But the first portion of the legend is found a little developed in the Gopatha Brāhmaṇa (II, 1), according to which Prajāpati, while performing a sacrifice, did not offer the requisite share of offerings to Rudra who thereupon 'seizing and piercing it (Yajña or Yajñāṅga) cut off a portion from it'. A look at it is said to have made Bhaga blind and Pūsan toothless.

Its Development into the Dakṣa-yajña Story.

The same legend later (sometime before the rise of the Guptas in the fourth century A.D.) developed into the well-known story of the destruction of the sacrifice of Dakṣa Prajāpati by the god Śiva, also called Rudra. The earliest form of the legend of Dakṣa-yajña-nāśa is probably to be traced in the Mahābhārata (XII, chapters 282-83; cf. Brahma Purāṇa, ch. 39) and a slightly modified form of the same story is found in many of the Purānas (Matsya, ch. 12; Padma, Sṛṣṭikhaṇḍa, ch. 5; Kūrma, I, ch. 15; Brahmāṇḍa, ch. 31, etc.) as well as in the Kumārasambhava (I, 21) of Kālidāsa who flourished in the fourth and fifth centuries and adorned the court of the Gupta Vikramādityas. According to this modified version of the legend, the mother-goddess, who was the wife of Śiva, was in the form of Satī one of the daughters of Dakṣa Prajāpati. Dakṣa was celebrating a great sacrifice for which neither Satī nor Śiva was invited. Satī, however, went to her father's sacrifice uninvited, but was greatly insulted by Daksa. As a result of this ill-treatment, Satī is said to have died by yoga or of a broken heart, or, as Kālidāsa says, she put herself into fire and perished. In the Mahābhārata version of the story, referred to above, the wife of Śiva is only responsible for pointing out, to her husband, Dakṣa's impertinence in disregarding the great god; but she is neither said to have been Daksa's

[1] See Appendix II.

the mother-goddess is Bhagavatī (literally, a deity possessing the bhaga). As the word bhaga is a synonym of Yoni, it is possible to suggest (although it is not easy to prove it in the present state of our knowledge) that the expression Bhagavatī originally indicated the female deity who was thought to have given birth to all creatures, and that the epithet Bhagavat, applied to Śiva and other gods, is merely a masculine form afterwards coined on the basis of Bhagavatī. It should also be pointed out that hills or mountain-peaks roughly resembling a human phallus were regarded in ancient times as the svayambhū (natural) Liṅga of Śiva. There is reason to believe that tanks or pools of a particular shape were often conceived as the Yoni of the mother-goddess. A pair of hills or peaks of the shape and position of female breasts appear sometimes to have been likewise regarded as the Stana of the goddess; cf. Kālidāsa's description (Raghuvaṃśa, IV, 51)[1] of the Malaya and Dardura mountains in the Pāṇḍya country as the two breasts of the lady that is the southern quarter. Water coming out of the springs on such hills could be very naturally taken to be the milk of the mother-goddess. All the three conceptions, viz. those of the Liṅga of the father-god and the Yoni and Stana of the mother-goddess, are based on the bearing the three particular limbs have on the birth and growth of beings as well as on the resemblance that particular natural objects may have with certain human limbs. An idea of the importance the Indians of ancient times must have attached to a bath in the Yoni-kuṇḍa and to the drinking of the water of the Stanakuṇḍa may be formed from another ritual known as the Hiraṇyagarbha-mahādāna, which was conceived in imitation of the Yonikuṇḍa of the mother-goddess. A pious prince desiring merit and willing to perform the mahādāna is sometimes found to have made a hiraṇya-garbha or 'golden womb' which was a big pot made of gold and was three cubits in height. He then entered the pot, of which the priests performed the ceremonies of garbhādhāna, puṃsavana and sīmantonnayana, as they would do in the case of an ordinary pregnant woman. The prince was afterwards taken out of the 'golden womb' and the jātakarman and other necessary functions were performed by the priests as if the prince was a newly born child. Thereafter the prince declared, 'O the best of gods, previously I was given birth to by my mother and had only the qualities of an earthly creature; but now owing to my rebirth from your womb I have a celestial body' (cf. Suc. Sāt., pp. 52–54). The celebration of the Hiraṇyagarbha-mahādāna was adapted from a ceremonial practice of the devotees of the mother-goddess by the worshippers of the male god Visnu. Just like the concept of the Liṅga, that of the Yoni and Stana of the mother-goddess appears to be very old. The history of the socio-religious life in ancient India suggests that these conceptions, like many others, are due to non-Aryan influence on the culture of the Indo-Aryans.[2]

Some Early Tīrthas associated with the Limbs of the Mother-goddess.

It seems that the association of the Yoni and Stana of the mother-goddess with certain localities belongs to the earliest stage of the history of the Pīthas. The Tīrtha-yātrā section in the Vanaparvan of the Mahābhārata, which is probably earlier than the rise of the Guptas in the fourth century A.D., refers at least to three Śākta holy places associated with the Yoni and Stana of Śakti. These are the Yonikuṇḍas at the Bhīmāsthāna near the Pañchanada (Punjab) and on the hill or mountain-peak called Udyatparvata, and the Stanakuṇḍa on the peak known as Gaurīśikhara

[2] See infra, Appendix VI.

(cf. Mahābhārata, III, 82, 83–85; III, 84, 93–95 and 151–53).[1] The name of the Gauriśikhara (literally, the peak of Gaurī, a form of the mother-goddess) probably connects the peak with the Himalayas.[2] The Mahābhārata seems to locate both the Gauriśikhara and the Udyatparvata in eastern India, the latter probably in the Gayā region. Their exact location is not beyond doubt, although it is tempting to identify the Gauriśikhara with the peak of that name placed by the Pīthanirṇaya in the Kāmarūpa country in the Gauhati region of Assam. The Bhīmāsthāna (literally, the resort of Bhīmā, a form of the mother-goddess) was situated on the Karamar not far from Shahbazgarhi in the Peshawar District of the North-Western Frontier Province. The Mārkaṇḍeya Purāṇa (ch. 91, vv. 45-46), an early Śākta work, speaks of the goddess Bhīmādevī of the Himācala (cf. also Appendix II, v. 22 infra). In the seventh century, this holy tīrtha belonging to the ancient country of Gandhāra (Rawalpindi-Peshawar region) was visited by the Chinese pilgrim Hiuen Tsang. According to the pilgrim, 'About 50 li (nearly 8 miles) to the north-east of Palusha was a great mountain which had a likeness of Maheśvara's spouse Bhīmādevī of dark blue stone. According to local accounts this was a natural image (svayambhū mūrti) of the goddess; it exhibited prodigies and was a great resort of devotees from all parts of India; to true believers, who after fasting seven days

At the foot of the mountain was a temple to Maheśvaradeva (Śiva) in which the ash-smearing Tīrthikas (Pāśupata Yogins) [1] performed much worship' (Watters, On Yuan Chwang's Travels in India, I, p. 221) [2] The account of

[1] In his description of Benares, Hiuen Tsang again refers to the devotees of Śiva some of whom 'cut off their hair, others made it into a top-knot, some went about naked and smeared themselves with ashes, they were persevering in austerities seeking release from mortal existence' (loc. cit., II, p. 47). For the ash-smearing ascetics, see Brhatsaṃhitā, ch. 60, verse 19:

विष्णोर्भागवतान् मगांश्च सवितुः शक्तेः सभस्मद्विजान्
मातृणामपि मातृमण्डलविदो विप्रान् विदुर्ब्रह्मणः।
शाक्यान् सर्वहितस्य शान्तमनसो नग्नान् जिनानां विदु-
र्ये य देवमुपाश्रिताः स्वविधिना तेषस्य कार्याः क्रियाः॥

While annotating this verse, Albīrūnī (op. cit., p. 121) refers to the devotees of Mahādeva (Śambhu-Śiva) as 'a class of saints, anchorites with long hair, who cover their skin with ashes, hang on their persons the bones of dead people, and swing in the pools'. They are the Śiva-bhāgavatas described by Patañjali in his commentary on Pāṇini, V, 2, 76, and were related to the Kāpālikas known from works like the Pañcatantra as characterized by carrying skulls of men in the form of garlands and eating and drinking from them For this sect, cf. the Mattavilāsaprahasana attributed to Pallava Mahendravarman I (c. 600–35 A.D.), Bhavabhūti's Mālatīmādhava (eighth century), an Early Calukya inscription, dated 639 A.D. (referring to the worship of the god Śiva Kāpāleśvara, i.e. lord of the wearers of skull-garlands, and to the maintenance of the Mahāvratins, i.e. observers of the great vow characteristic of the Kāpālikas or Kālāmukhas, who resided in the temple of the god), etc. See R. G. Bhandarkar, Vaisnavism, Śaivism, etc. (Poona ed), pp. 165ff.

Bhavabhūti's Mālatīmādhava speaks of a woman styled yoginī, who performed the Kāpālikavrata at the Śrīparvata and illustrates the vrata by the horrible activities of Aghoraghaṇṭa and his female disciple Kapālakundalā who are represented as coming from the Śrīparvata and staying near the mahāśmaśāna (at Padmāvatī in the Gwalior State) containing a temple of Cāmundā to whom they were going to offer the girl Mālatī in sacrifice This eighth century authority not only testifies to the prevalence of human sacrifice before the mother-goddess but also to the interesting fact that the Kāpālikas were devoted to both Śiva and Śaktı. The practices of the Kāpālikas are often called Vīrācāra and Vāmācāra.

'From the Mattavilāsa-prahasana, it becomes clear that, to a Kāpālika, the Kapāla is as essential as is a sacred thread to a Brāhmana. If he loses it, he should provide himself with another in a stated time He should cover his body with ashes and make himself hideous, and drink liquor from the skull of a human being One of the articles of faith is that the effect always resembles, to a certain extent, the cause; therefore from the practice of austerities in this life one cannot obtain bliss in another life, since austerities and bliss are of opposite nature. The Kāpālikas carried in addition to the Kapāla a cow's horn both for blowing during their worship and drinking from. The people of this faith associated freely with women Kāpālikas.' Cf. R. Gopalan, History of the Pallavas, pp. 94-95 The Kūrma Purāna (cf I 16, 117, etc.) distinguishes the Kāpālikas from the Pāśupatas as well as from the other Śaiva sects and says that 'the Pāśupatas hate those sects which are guided by the Tantras' (R C Hazra, Puranic Rites, p 64; also Sattrimśanmata quoted at p 201) Cf the words pākhaṇḍa and pākhaṇḍin in the sense possibly of the Kāpālikas in the Mālatīmādhava, V, 24 and the Mitāksarā on Yāj., III, 6. The Rāj tar. (III, 267) refers to Śrīparvata as a centre of the Pāśupatas and also to their existence in Kashmir (I, 17; V, 404) The doctrines and practices of the Pāśupatas (distinguished from the Kāpālikas) as described in the Kūrma Purāna show that they were not extremists like the latter with whom they were sometimes identified For the Atharvaśiras Upanisad on the early doctrine of the Pāśupatas, see Bhandarkar, Vaisnavism, etc, pp 158ff

[2] While describing the Gandhāra country, Hiuen Tsang elsewhere (Watters, op. cit., p. 215) says that at the distance of 50 li (about 8 miles) to the north-west of certain monasteries (including the Aśoka stūpa at Puskalāvatī, modern Mirziyarat-Charsadda area near Peshawar) there was a stūpa at the place where the Buddha converted the 'Mother of Demons' (the Buddhist goddess Hārītī) and that the people of the country worshipped this Demon-mother and prayed to her for offspring. The deity was apparently an aspect of the mother-goddess. The stūpa is now called Sāre Mākhe Dherī.

the foreign traveller points clearly to the importance and popularity of the ancient Bhīmā tīrtha. The existence of the temple of Śiva at the foot of Bhīmā's peak probably suggests that the association of a Bhairava with the Śākta Pīṭha is earlier than the seventh century. But it is not definitely known whether the Bhīmāsthāna, Udyatparvata and Gaurīśikhara were styled Pīṭhas in the technical Tantric sense of the term and whether they were counted among the recognized Pīṭhas in the days of Hiuen-Tsang [1]

The Tradition about Four Pīṭhas.

Some of the early Tantras refer to four Pīṭhas. This Catuspīṭha conception may have been associated with a conception of the Sahajayāna school of the Buddhists, according to which one can rise to eternal bliss from sexual pleasure. A Sahajayāna text entitled Catuspīṭhatantra and its commentaries (one of which was copied in 1145 A.D.; cf. H. P. Sastri, Cat. Palm-leaf and Selected Paper Manuscripts belonging to the Durbar Library, Nepal, II, p viii) speak of the four Pīṭhas as Ātmapīṭha, Parapīṭha, Yogapīṭha and Guhyapīṭha and deal with the various kinds of Vajrasattva's intercourse with the Yoginīs, such as Prajñāpāramitā and others. This philosophical concept of the Catuspīṭha was either the cause or the effect of the early recognition of four holy places as Pīṭhas.[2]

[1] See infra, Appendix VI. For the association of Śiva with the Pīṭhas, cf. Devī-bhāgavata, Bk. VII, ch. 30, verses 44–50:

अपश्यन्तां सतीं वक्त्रौ दह्यमानान्तु चित्कलाम् ।
स्कन्धेऽप्यारोपयामास त्वा सतीति वदन् मुहुः ॥
बभ्राम भ्रान्तचित्तः सन्नानादेशेषु शङ्करः ।

विष्णुस्तु त्वरया तत्र धनुरुद्यम्य मार्गणैः ।

इत्युक्त्वा शङ्करस्तेषु स्थानेषु विरराम तुरः ।
काल निम्ने त्वपत्रेष्ठ जपध्यानसमाधिभिः ॥

But the early association of Śakti and Śiva at Bhīmāsthāna does not prove that the story connecting certain tīrthas with Sati's limbs had already developed in the days of Hiuen Tsang. Cf. Banerjea, Development of Hindu Iconography, p. 92n.

[2] It is difficult to determine what relation the Catuspīṭha could have with the Catuspīṭha-parvata near Jajpur in Orissa and with other Sahajayāna conceptions of 'four', e.g. the Caturānanda. The Candamahārosanatantra (Sastri, Cat., pp. ix-x) is said to have been uttered by Vajrasattva (Buddha) when he was staying in the female organ of Vajradhātvīśvarī. The first verse uttered is:

भावाभावविनिर्मुक्तश्चतुरानन्दतत्परः ।
निष्प्रपञ्चस्वरूपोऽहं सर्वसंकल्पवर्जितः ॥

Caturānanda, i.e. the pleasures of four kinds, has been explained as embracing, kissing, pressing the breast, and pricking with the nails (i.e. imprinting nail-marks). These are said to last as long as the thunderbolt is in union with the lotus.

In the opinion of some writers, the Hevajra Tantra of the Buddhists was composed shortly before 693 A.D.[1] But according to Buddhist tradition, Padmavajra, author of the Hevajra Tantra, was the preceptor of Anangavajra, a son of king Gopāla[2] who founded the Pāla dynasty in Bengal about the middle of the eighth century A.D. If this tradition is to be accepted, the composition of the Hevajra Tantra may be assigned to the same century. This early work enumerates the following four holy regions as Pīṭhas. (1) Jālandhara, (2) Oḍiyāna (Uḍḍiyāna in the Swat valley),[3] (3) Pūrnagiri and (4) Kāmarūpa.[4] Exactly the same tradition is followed in the Kālikā Purāna (ch. 64, 43–45)[5] according to which the four Pīthas were: (1) Odra, seat of the goddess Kātyāyanī and god Jagannātha,[6] in the west, (2) Jālaśaila, seat of the goddess Candī and god Mahādeva in the north, (3) Pūrna or Pūrnaśaila (Pūrnagiri), seat of the goddess Pūrneśvarī and god Mahānātha, in the south, and (4) Kāmarūpa,

[3] The suggestion that Oddiyāna was situated in eastern India and is no other than Odra (Orissa) is unworthy of any serious consideration. Cf. Lévi, Journ. As., 1915, pp. 105–10; P. C. Bagchi, Studies in the Tantras, I, pp. 37ff., 42. For some other unwarranted theories about the location of Uddiyāna, see I.H.Q., XI, pp. 142ff.; J.As.R.S., V, pp. 14ff. The Kālikā Purāna, quoted by Nānyadeva (c. 1097–1133 A.D.) in his Bharatabhāsya and by Aparārka (c. 1115–40 A.D.) and Ballālasena (c. 1159–85 A.D.), seems to have been originally incorporated in the Rudrayāmala Tantra; cf. Des. Cat. Sans. MSS., R.A.S.B., VIII, p. 70. This Purāna (really an Upa-Purāna) is earlier than 1000 A.D. according to Gode, J.O.R., X, pp. 289ff.; J.Or.Ac., II, p. 60. Cf. Hazra, op. cit., p. 53; infra, p. 17, note 4. Some sections may, however, have been later added to the original Purāna seat of the deities Kāmeśvarī and Kāmeśvara [1] in the east. That Oḍra in the list is a mistake for Uḍḍiyāna and that Jālaśaila is the same as Jālandhara are clear from another section of the same Purāṇa (ch. 18, 42–44 and 49–51) [2] representing the goddesses Kātyāyanī and Candī as the presiding deities respectively of Uḍḍiyāna and Jālandharagiri.[3] Other Buddhist works such as the Sādhanamālā (G.O S., pp. 453, 455) give the four names as (1) Oḍiyāna or Uḍḍīyana, (2) Pūrṇagiri, (3) Kāmarūpa or Kāmākhyā, and (4) Srīhatta or Sirihaṭṭa. Śrīhaṭṭa has been substituted in this list

[1] Cf. reference to Mahāgaurī (Kāmākhyā) and Kāmeśvara (on the Kāmakūta hill) in some early records of Assam; see infra. The identification of Mahāgaurī with Bhuvaneśī (I.H.Q, XXIII, p. 324, Kālikā P., 62, 127) on the top of the Kāmakhyā hill is rendered doubtful by her association with Kāmeśvara. The boundaries of Kāmarūpa are indicated by the Yoginītantra (Patala XI) quoted in Ep. Ind., XII, p. 68:

नेपालस्य काञ्चनाद्रि ब्रह्मपुत्रस्य सङ्गमम् ।
करतोयां समारभ्य यावद्दिक्करवासिनीम् ॥
उत्तरस्यां कञ्जगिरिः करतोया तु पश्चिमे ।

This Kāñcana or Kañja Mount is probably the Kunchenjinga. The Diksu, which may be associated with Dikkaravāsinī although the latter is located at Dikrang near Sadiya in north-eastern Assam, is the modern Dikhu falling in the Brahmaputra near Sibsagar. The confluence of the Lāksā (Lakhyā) and the Brahmaputra is in the Mymensing District. The Karatoyā which now runs through North Bengal and falls in the Yamunā in the Pabna District, was the western boundary of Kāmarūpa also according to Chinese sources. A manuscript of the Yoginī Tantra (R A.S.B, No. I. B. 29, p. 33) reads: नेपालस्य च काञ्चद्रिं । Some writers prefer the reading: उत्तरस्यां कुञ्जगिरिः । For Kāmarūpa's four divisions (Pīṭhas), viz. Kāma, Ratna, Bhadra or Suvarna and Saumāra, see Gait, Hist. As., p. 11. Kāmarūpa is also called Kubjikā Pīṭha (Kālikā P, 62, 58, etc.)

For details of other Pīthas mentioned here, see infra, p. 17. For the same confusion between Odra (placed in north-western India) and Uḍḍiyāna in early literature, see Mahābhārata, II, 47, 19.

[3] The location of the Oḍra (Orissa) country in the western part of India has also to be noted. This points actually to Uḍḍiyāna in north-western India.

Khāti, "the eater of raw flesh", to whom human sacrifices were offered. After their subjugation by the Ahoms, the Deoris were permitted to continue their ghastly rites; but they were usually given, for the purpose, criminals who had been sentenced to capital punishment. Failing them, victims were taken from a particular clan, which in return was accorded certain privileges. The person selected was fed sumptuously, until he was in sufficiently plump condition to suit the supposed test of the goddess, and he was then decapitated at the Copper Temple at Sadiya, or at some other shrine of the tribe. Human sacrifices were also formerly offered by the Tipperas, Kachāris, Koches, Jaintias and other Assam tribes' (E. Gait, History of Assam, 1926, p. 42; J.A.S.B., 1898, p. 56).[1] It may be pointed out in this connection that the Chinese pilgrim noticed the influence of the Pāśupatas or Tīrthikas, with whom the Tantric devotees of Śakti and Śiva were associated, all over India—in Jālandhara, Ahicchatra (?), Malakūta (in the Far South), Mālava, Benares, Maheśvarapura (on the Narmadā), the land about eastern Makran, Bannu (?) and even Khotan (in Central Asia); cf. loc. cit., I, 296, 331; II, 47, 229, 242, 251, 257, 262, 296, etc. Bhavabhūti's Mālatīmādhava not only speaks of a great centre of the Kāpālikas (cf. supra, p. 10, note 1), apparently devoted to the god Śiva Mallikārjuna, at Śrīparvata (Śrīśaila in the Karnool District, Madras Presidency), but also of their devotion to an image of the mother-goddess Cāmuṇḍā (another name of Tārā or Kālī according to the Kālikā Purāṇa, ch. 61, 85–91), entitled Karālā, in a temple at Padmāvatī (Padampawaya near Narwar in the Gwalior State).

Another point of interest in the account of the four Pīṭhas is the importance of the Gandhāra, Uḍḍiyāna, Jālandhara and Kashmir countries of north-western India as centres of Tantricism. Hiuen Tsang not only noticed the prevalence of Śakti worship in Gandhāra, but has also left an account of the popularity of Tantric practices among the people of Uḍḍiyāna. According to the pilgrim, 'The people (of Uḍḍiyāna) were pusillanimous and deceitful; they were fond of learning but not as a study, and they made the acquisition of magical formulae their occupation' (Watters, op. cit., p. 225). Uḍḍiyāna's eminence in the Tantric world is also indicated by the recognized association of its name with the worship of the Buddhist deities Mārīcī, Kurukullā (identified with Kālī in some passages cited in the Tantrasāra), Lokeśvara and Urdhvapāda-Vajravārāhī (cf. Sādhanamālā, G.O.S., pp. 80, 83, 283ff., 361, 439). Indrabhūti, the Buddhist king of Uḍḍiyāna, was a celebrated Tantric teacher who composed the Jñānasiddhi and other works. He was the father of Padmasambhava, the famous teacher of the Yogācāra doctrine, who was responsible for the popularity of Buddhism in Tibet and established in that country the great Bsam-yas monastery in c. 787 A.D. with the help of a Bengali (?) Buddhist teacher named Śāntarakṣita or Śānti°. The lady Lakṣīṃkarā, a sister of king

[1] Cf. 'When the new temple of Kāmākhyā was opened, the occasion was celebrated by the immolation of no less than a hundred and forty men, whose heads were offered to the goddess on salvers made of copper. Similar sacrifices were offered to various aboriginal deities. According to the Haft Iqlim, there was in Kāmarūpa a class of persons called Bhogīs, who were voluntary victims of a goddess named Ai who dwelt in a cave; from the time when they announced that the goddess had called them, they were treated as privileged persons; they were allowed to do whatever they liked, and every woman was at their command, but when the annual festival came round, they were killed. Magic also held an important place in the estimation of the people, and in the 'Ain-i-Akbari they were accused, among other practices, of divination by the examination of a child cut out of the body of "a pregnant woman who has gone her full term of months"' (History of Assam, p. 58).

Indrabhūti, composed the Buddhist Tantra work entitled Advayasiddhi.[1] The rule of the Turkish Musalmans, that spread over north-western India from the tenth century, led to the gradual decline of the once flourishing Tantric culture in that part of India.

Different Traditions regarding the Number of Pīthas.

Although four Pīṭhas were associated roughly with the northern, southern, eastern and western regions of India,[2] writers on the subject are not unanimous as regards the exact number of the seats of the mother-goddess. The Kālikā Purāna account of the four Pīṭhas has been already noticed; but a different section of the same Purāna (ch. 18, verses 42–51) gives an account of seven Pīṭhas (including the four seats of the goddess described above), no less than three of which are located in Kāmarūpa. According to this section, the Pīṭhas are: (1) Devīkūṭa (i.e. Devīkoṭṭa, modern Bangarh in the Dinajpur District of Bengal) where Satī's two feet fell on the ground and where the Devī is Mahābhāgā; (2) Uḍḍiyāna where the two thighs fell and where the Devī is Kātyāyanī; (3) Kāmagiri in Kāmarūpa where the pudendum muliebre fell and the Devī is Kāmākhyā, (4) a locality on the eastern border of Kāmarūpa where the navel fell and where the Devī is Dikkaravāsinī; (5) Jālandhara where the two breasts fell and where the Devī is Caṇḍī; (6) Pūrnagiri where the neck and shoulders fell and where the Devī is Pūrneśvarī; and (7) a locality on the borders of Kāmarūpa where the head fell and where the Devī is Lalitakāntā.[3] A Tantra work entitled Rudrayāmala, which seems to have been composed considerably earlier than 1052 A.D.,[4] mentions ten holy places as the 'principal' Pīṭhas. These ten Pīṭhas, which include the celebrated four discussed above are: (1) Kāmarūpa, (2) Jālandhara, (3) Pūrnagiri, (4) Oḍḍiyāna (Uḍḍiyāna), (5) Vārānasī (Benares), (6) Jvalantī (probably Jvālā-mukhī of later texts), (7) Māyāvatī (near Hardwar), (8) Madhupurī (Muttra), (9) Ayodhyā (near Fyzabad, U.P.), and (10) Kāñcī (Conjeeveram in the [1] Cf. Bhattacharya, op. cit., pp. li–lv. Bhattacharya gives the date of the foundation of the Bsam-yas monastery as 749 A.D. But the period of Padmasambhava's stay in Tibet is usually assigned to circa 780–95 A.D. by recent writers on the subject (F. W. Thomas, Indianism and its Expansion, p. 79).

[2] As the number 3 had a mystic significance with many ancient peoples of the world (cf. the Trimūrti, Triratna, Tribhuvana, etc., of the Indians, the Anu-Bel-Ea trinity of the Babylonians, and the Osiris-Isis-Horus triad of the Egyptians), there was also a tradition about three Piṭhas, cf. Ānandārnava Tantra quoted in Des. Cat. Sans. MSS., R.A.S.B., VIII, p. 213:

विद्याखण्डचयोपेतांस्त्रिपीठांस्त्रिदलान्वरे ।
कामरूपक-जालन्ध्र-पूर्णभूपुर(भूधर)सञ्ज्ञकान् ॥

[3] Supra, p. 13, note 2. A passage (probably adapted from the Kālikā Purāna) in the sixth Paṭala of the Bṛhan-Nīlatantra refers to the same five Pīṭhas:

देवीकोटे महाभागा उड्डीयाने च भैरवी ।
योनिमुद्रा कामरूपे महिषासुरमर्दिनी ॥
कात्यायनी कामभूमौ कामाख्या कामरूपिनी ।
जालन्धरे (पूर्णशैले) च पूर्णेशी पूर्ण शैले (जालन्धरे) च चण्डिका ॥
कामरूपे ततो देवी पूज्या दिक्करवासिनी ॥

The temple of Dikkaravāsinī is usually located at Dikrang near Sadiya. Lalitakāntā is now popularly associated with the hill-streams Sandhyā, Lalitā and Kāntā not far from Gauhati

[4] The Rudrayāmala is mentioned in the Brahmayāmala, a manuscript of which was copied in 1052 A.D. (Bagchi, op. cit., pp. 6-7). Cf. supra, p. 12, note 5.

Chingleput District, Madras Presidency).[1] The language of the Rudrayāmala suggests that its author had knowledge of some other Pīthas of lesser importance. A passage from this work quoted in the Kulārṇava Tantra (Des. Cat. Sans MSS., R A S.B., VIII, pp. 110-11) actually speaks of the following 18 Pīṭhas: (1) Uḍḍiyāna, (2) Devīdaikotha (Devīkoṭṭa), (3) Hiṅgulā, (4) Koṭimudrā, (5) Jālandhara, (6) Vārānasī, (7) Antarvedī, (8) Prayāga, (9) Mithilā, (10) Māgadha, (11) Mekhalā (Mekalā), (12) Anga, (13) Vaṅga, (14) Kalinga, (15) Simhala, (16) Strīrājya, (17) Rādhā and (18) Gauḍa. That, however, the list of even the pradhāna Pīthas were drawn arbitrarily without any basis of accepted tradition is clearly demonstrated by the discrepancy among similar lists of Pīthas found in different works. A passage of the Jñānārnava Tantra (Ānandāśrama ed., Patala V, verses 66-67), which was composed considerably earlier than the middle of the sixteenth century,[2] enumerates eight important Pīthas in the following order: (1) Kāmarūpa, (2) Malaya, (3) Kaulagiri, (4) Kulāntaka, (5) Cauhāra (not mentioned in the Jñānārṇava list of 42 Pīthas and may be a result of misreading), (6) Jālandhara, (7) Uddiyāna, and (8) Devakūṭa (Devīkotta).[3] As a matter of fact, there are only a few common names in the lists of the Rudrayāmala and the Jñānārṇava. Such is also the case with other lists of the Pīthas which usually contain only a number of common names.

There is a very small work entitled Aṣṭādaśapīṭha incorporated in Manuscript No. 5913 in the library of the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengal. This work, which is full of textual errors, is ascribed to Śaṅkarācārya (probably the same as Śankara Āgamācārya, the Bengali author of the Tārārahasya-vṛttikā, an R A.S.B. copy of which was made in Śaka 1583 = 1661 A D.) and mentions eighteen Pīthas together with the Pīṭha-devīs. Although some of these names are apparently doubtful, it is interesting that the list of eighteen Pīthas includes: (1) Laṅkā—Śaṅkarī, (2) Ālāpura—Yugalā, (3) Śrīśaila—Bhramarāmbikā, (4) Kolhāpura—Mahālaksmī, (5) Vārānasī—Viśālāksī, and (6) Kāśmīra—Sarasvatī (Śāradā). The location of Bhramarāmbikā on the Śrīśaila and of Mahālaksmī at Kolhapur in the southern part of the Bombay Presidency is specially interesting because Bhramarāmbā, still worshipped on the Śriśaila, is not mentioned in the other texts, while Kolhapur reminds one of Kolvagiri, etc., and of Mahālakṣmī or Mahālaksmīpura (cf. I.C., VIII, p. 49). The interesting work on the eighteen

Pīṭhas is said to have been written down by one Sambhunath Kar of Calcutta in Samvat 1863 = 1806 A.D. from the dictation of an Utkala Brāhmana who was an inhabitant of Jahājapura (Jājpur) on the Vaitaranī.[1]

Another Tantra text entitled Kubjikā Tantra, usually supposed to be a fairly early work, enumerates the following Siddha-Pīthas: (1) Māyāvatī, (2) Madhupurī, (3) Kāśī, (4) Goraksakārinī or Goraksacārinī, (5) Hiṅgulā, (6) Jālandhara, (7) Jvālāmukhī, (8) Nāgarasambhava, (9) Rāmagiri, (10) Godāvarī, (11) Nepāla, (12) Karnasūtra, (13) Mahākarna, (14) Ayodhyā, (15) Kuruksetra, (16) Simhanāda or Simhala, (17) Manipura, (18) Hṛṣīkeśa, (19) Prayāga, (20) Badarī, (21) Ambikā, (22) Vardhamāna or Ardhanālaka, (23) Trivenī (probably Muktavenī near Calcutta and not Yuktavenī at Prayāga which is separately mentioned), (24) Gaṅgā-ṣāgara-saṅgama, (25) Nārikela, (26) Virajā, (27) Uddiyāna, (28) Kamalā, (29) Vimalā, (30) Māhiṣmatī, (31) Vārāhī, (32) Tripurā, (33) Vāgmatī, (34) Nīlavāhinī, (35) Govardhana, (36) Vindhyagiri, (37) Kāmarūpa, (38) Ghantākarna, (39) Hayagrīva or Aksayagrīva, (40) Mādhava, (41) Ksīragrāma, and (42) Vaidyanātha.[2]

This list, probably composed in eastern India, speaks rather independently of about forty-two Pīṭhas some of which seem to represent actually the names of deities. Reference to the Vindhyan region as a Pīṭha in this list no doubt points to the resort of the celebrated non-Aryan goddess Vindhyavāsinī (identified with the Indian mother-goddess) whose temple stands near modern Mirzapur in the United Provinces. The antiquity of the worship of this goddess is proved by the fact that, according to Vākpatirāja's Gauḍavaha, king Yaśovarman (c. 730–53 A.D.) offered his homage to Devī Vindhyavāsinī in connection with his expedition for the conquest of the quarters. In the twelfth century, Kalhana (Rāj. tar., III, pp. 394–431) seems to refer to the same deity as Bhramaravāsinī [1] in connection with a sixth century Kashmirian king named Ranāditya. The celebrated Śākta work entitled Caṇḍī, incorporated in the Mārkaṇḍeya Purāṇa, gives evidence to the cult of the goddess Vindhyavāsinī (cf. ch. 91, v. 37). That the resort of this early and important deity is not mentioned in all the different lists of Pīthas containing even names of lesser importance, indicates the absence of recognized traditions and the freedom an author may have exercised in this matter.

Evidence of the Jñānārṇava and the Tantrasāra regarding the Number of Pīṭhas.

Eight Pīthas mentioned in the Jñānārṇava Tantra have been mentioned above. It is interesting to note that a different section of the same work definitely gives the recognized number of Pīṭhas as fifty only.[2] These fifty Pīṭhas are: (1) Kāmarūpa, (2) Vārānasī, (3) Nepāla, (4) Paunḍravardhana (Mahasthan in the Bogra District, North Bengal), (5) Kashmir, (6) Kānyakubja, (7) Purasthita (v.l. Purasthira), (8) Carasthita (v.l. Candrāsthira, Carasthira), (9) Pūrnaśaila, (10) Arbuda, (11) Āmrātakeśvara, (12) Ekāmra (Bhuvaneśvar in Orissa), (13) Trisrotaḥ (the Tista river in north-eastern

This list can hardly be very early. But the idea (Rāyamālā, I, ed. K. P. Sen, p. 124) that the Kubjikā speaks of 127 Pīthas is due to the wrong impression created by the Prānatoṣanī which quotes several lists from the Bṛhan-Nīlatantra, without reference to the source, in continuation of the Kubjikā list.

[1] The name has, as the Rāj. tar. seems to imply, bearing on the condition of the Vindhyan forests infested with bees. The Indian mother-goddess is given the name Bhrāmarī in some texts (Mārkandeya Purāna, 91, 49; Devībhāgavata, X, 10, 13); cf. the name of Bhramarāmbā on the Śrīśaila. The Pīthanirnaya locates this deity in northern Bengal and in the Nasik region of the Bombay Presidency. It is interesting to note that certain forms of the mother-goddess in western Asia, such as Nanaia and Artemes, had the bee for their symbol. The Indian mother-goddess riding a lion reminds one of the Cappadocian Ma who stands on a lioness or panther. Like Śiva, Ma's consort Teshub also rides on a bull and has the three-pronged thunder-bolt (cf. triśūla) as his distinctive weapon. See Raychaudhuri, D. R. Bhand. Volume, pp. 301–03. The goddess Vindhyavāsinī is possibly called Śūlinī in the Tantrasāra, p. 193. The Gaudavaha (verses 285–347) identifies Vindhyavāsinī with Kālī or Pārvatī, associates her with the Kols and Śabaras, and refers to human sacrifices offered to her. For the goddess, fond of wine and flesh and worshipped by the Śabaras, Pulindas and Barbaras, see Hariv., II, iii, 7-8.

places. This attempt may possibly be attributed to eastern India. The above list has been quoted and utilized in a Pīṭhanyāsa section of the Tantrasāra by the Bengali Tantric teacher Kṛṣṇānanda Āgamavāgīśa in the seventeenth century.[1] Curiously enough the Tantrasāra, in spite of its clear recognition of the number of Pīthas to be fifty only in accordance with the Jñānārṇava Tantra, actually makes fifty-one Pīthas out of the fifty enumerated above. This has been done strangely by splitting the name of one of the fifty Pīṭhas, viz Merugiri (No. 44) into two names, viz. Meru Pītha and Giri Pīṭha,[2] in the formal nyāsa associating certain limbs with the Pīthas.[3] The anomaly was probably the result of a modification of the text of the Tantrasāra by later hands What is, however, more interesting is that the Pīṭhanirṇaya or Mahāpīṭhanirūpaṇa, which has been quoted in the Prāṇatosanī Tantra by Rāmatosana Vidyālaṅkāra, who was seventh in descent from the compiler of the Tantrasāra, in 1820 adheres exactly to this modified number of the Pīthas, viz. fifty-one, although the list itself is independent of the earlier lists of Pīthas. As this work is not quoted in the Tantrasāra or any other earlier Tantra dealing with the Pīṭhas, it seems that the Pīṭhanirṇaya was composed or became popular in eastern India shortly after the compilation of the Tantrasāra by Krsnānanda Āgamavāgīśa (seventeenth century) but before that of the Prānatoṣaṇī Tantra by Rāmatosana in 1820. As the work was utilized by Bhāratacandra in his Annadāmangala (1752), it must have been composed earlier than the middle of the eighteenth century. The composition of the Pīṭhanirnaya or Mahāpīṭhanirūpaṇa may therefore be assigned to the closing years of the seventeenth century or more probably to the early years of the eighteenth (c. 1690–1720). The reference to Kālighāṭa, whose popularity seems to be associated with the foundation of Calcutta (1690) and whose mention in earlier works is rare,[1] possibly supports this date. The important feature of this work, as it is usually accepted in Bengal, is that its list of Pīṭhas together with the names of the Devī and the Bhairava, includes a number of places in the rural areas of Bengal. The language is in some cases greatly influenced by Bengali. The history of the literature on the Pīṭhas no doubt points unmistakably to the great contribution Bengal must have made to the Tantric literature and culture in the medieval period. The greatest centre of Tantricism seems to have originally been in north-western India. Before the medieval period, the Tantric school of north-eastern India rose to eminence and became a great rival of the north-western school. With the gradual decline of Tantric culture in the north-west as a result of foreign occupation, Bengal seems to have come to the forefront as the abode of great leaders of Tantric thought.

The Tradition about 108 Pīṭhas.

The uncertainty about the recognized number of the Pīṭhas in the medieval period is also demonstrated by another fact. The number 108 had some importance in India to the sectarian worshippers who often attempted to endow their respective deities with 108 names.[2] In the list of such 108 names of a particular deity, names or epithets of various other deities were appropriated, the underlying idea being that the latter are only different manifestations of the former. The love of system and concord, which is a feature of the Indian mind, inspired theologians to harmonize Brahman, Viṣṇu and Śiva in the compound form of the Trimūrti, Viṣṇu and Śiva in that of Hari-Hara, and Śiva and Śakti in that of Ardha-nār-īśvara. The theory of the ten Avatāras of Visnu was likewise the result of an attempt at harmonization of different religious sects worshipping different cult-deities.[3] Even in recent times, the Bāuls of Bengal, both Muslim and [1] There is no mention of Kalighat as a Pīṭha in the Candīmangala (16th century) by Mukundarāma of the Burdwan District. But Vipradāsa's Manasāmangala (1495 A.D.) mentions Kālikā of Kalighat, Sarvamangalā of Citpur (now included in Calcutta) and Beṭāi-Candī of Betor (near Sibpur in the Howrah District). Even if this reference is not an interpolation, it does not prove that Kalighat was regarded as an important tīrtha in the fifteenth century. The sixteenth century author Vaṃśīdāsa of Mymensing does not regard Kalighat as a Pīṭha. See infra, p. 33 and note 3.

[2] Cf. the list of various names of Śiva in the Sanatkumāra-saṃhitā section (ch. 31) of the Śiva Purāna and in the Kedārakhanda subsection of the Māheśvarakhaṇḍa section of the Skanda Purāna. For a list of the different names of Brahman, see Padma Purāna, Sṛṣṭikhaṇḍa, ch. 34; Skanda Purāna, Prabhāsakhanda, ch. 107. The idea seems to have originated from the Śatarudrīya section of the Yajurveda (Taittirīya Saṃhitā, IV, 5, 1; Vājasaneyī Saṃhitā, ch. 16). A Bengali text entitled Śrīkṛṣṇa-śatanāma (literally, the 100 names of Lord Kṛṣṇa) is very popular in Bengal and is daily recited by many pious people. There are also later lists of the 1,000 names of some gods, notably Viṣnu. See Des. Cat., R.A.S.B., VIII, pp. 173, 500, 812, 815, 820ff., 842, etc. For two lists of the sahasranāma of Viṣnu and Śiva, see Mahābhārata, XIII, chs. 149 and 17. For the importance of the numbers 108 and 1008, see Tantrasāra, pp. 48, 116, 131, 157, 538, 652, 733, 761, 781, 825-26, 903, 905, 918, 920, 973, etc., and 83, 157, 906-07, 928, etc. The importance of the number 108 is clearly demonstrated by the fact that even today the revered names of many religious teachers are mentioned as prefixed by the word Śrī for no less than 108 times, although in actual practice Śrī for 108 times is indicated by the expression 'śrī 108'.

[3] See Sircar, 'Sectarian Difference among the Early Vaiṣṇavas' in Bhār. Vid., VIII, pp. 109–11.

Hindu, have been declaring in their songs the absolute identity of Rāma and Rahim, of Christ (Beng. Khṛṣṭa) and Krsna (vulgo Kṛṣṇa), of Śiva and 'Alī, and of Durgā and Fatīma. A section of the devotees of the mother-goddess is known to have endowed their cult-deity with 108 names attempting thereby to identify her with various goddesses and with the female forms (Śaktis or energizing powers) of many gods worshipped in different parts of India. An early list of this nature can be traced in the Mahābhārata (VI, ch. 23); but a complete list of the 108 names of the mother-goddess with the specification of her association with particular holy places is probably to be found for the first time in the Matsya Purāṇa, ch. 13, the particular section, however, being assignable to the early medieval period [1]. The same text has been quoted in the description of the various manifestations of Bhadrakarnikā (a form of the mother-goddess) in the Revākhaṇḍa subsection of the Āvantyakhaṇḍa in the Skanda Purāṇa (which in its present form is not earlier than the twelfth century) [2] as well as in the enumeration of the different names of the goddess Sāvitrī, the wife of Brahman, in the Sṛṣṭikhaṇḍa section (ch. 17) of the Padma Purāṇa. The same text is also quoted in the Devībhāgavata (VII, ch. 30) which, unlike the Matsya, Skanda and Padma Purānas, refers to the holy places, associated in this work with the different manifestations of the mother-goddess and of her consort, as Pīṭhas without, however, mentioning the particular limbs of the goddess and the particular Bhairavas, although it says that the list contains the names of some Pīṭhas in addition to those that 'sprang from' the limbs of Satī.[3]

[1] Ch. 13 of the Matsya Purāṇa refers to Vṛndāvana as the resort of Rādhā and to Purusottama. There is no genuine evidence to show that Rādhā was recognized as a divinity earlier than the post-Gupta period and that Purusottama (Purī) attained to any eminence before the days of Anantavarman Codaganga (1078–1147 A.D.), who laid the foundation of the great temple of Jagannātha at Purī. Cf. also reference to Māṇḍavyapura (Mandor in the Jodhpur State), Vaidyanātha, etc., which do not appear to be early, although the Matsya Purāna in some form must have existed in earlier times.

[2] Cf. references to Rāmānuja (Visnukhaṇḍa, ch. 21) who flourished in the age of the Chola King Adhirājendra (c. 1070 A.D.) and the Hoysala Visnuvardhana (c. 1106–41 A.D.), to the Gurjara-Pratihāra King Bhoja I (c. 836–85 A.D.) and to King Āma of Kanauj who was either the same as Āma (c. 753–65 A.D.), son of Yaśovarman (c. 730–53 A.D.) or as Āma-Nāgabhata II (c. 805–33 A.D.), grandfather of Bhoja I. Vide Prabhāsakhaṇḍa-Vastrāpathamāhātmya, ch. 1ff.; Brahmakhaṇḍa-Dharmāraṇya-khaṇḍa, ch. 36ff. These, however, do not prove that the Skanda Purāna did not exist in any form in earlier times. In the first half of the 11th century, Albīrūnī had information about the 18 Purānas including the Skanda (Sachau, loc. cit., pp. 130-31). For a Bengal manuscript of this Purāna 'written in Gupta hand, to which as early a date as the middle of the seventh century can be assigned on palaeographical grounds', see JRAS, 1903, p. 193; Smith EHI, 1924, p. 23.

[3] A later list of 108 Pīthas is found in the Prānatosanī Tantra, p. 236 (cf. Vācaspatya, s.v. pītha). The verses appear to have been quoted from the Bṛhan-Nīlatantra (Paṭala V) which was known to the Prāṇatosanī (cf. p. 2). As there are several lists in it, the Bṛhan-Nīla, itself a late-medieval work, probably also drew from some slightly earlier sources. If it is the same as the Mahā-Nīlatantra, it must be regarded as earlier than c. 1550 A.D. when Brahmānanda mentioned it in his Tārārahasya (Paṭala I). But this date is doubtful, as the Bṛhan-Nīla quotes one list of 52 Pīthas.

(Apte, Sanskrit-English Dictionary, s.v. mātr). In place of Cāmundā of the first list, the Mārkandeya Purāna (ch. 88) gives Nārasimhī. These seven names are found in the list of the eight nāyikās or yoginīs to be worshipped along with the form of the mother-goddess called Kausiki-Caṇḍikā in the Kālikā Purāna, ch. 61, 84:

ब्रह्माणी प्रथमा प्रोक्ता ततो माहेश्वरी मता।
कौमारी चैव वाराही वैष्णवी पञ्चमी तथा॥
नारसिंही तथैवेन्द्री शिवदूती तथाष्टमी॥

For Śivadūtī, cf. Mārkandeya Purāna, loc. cit.

In place of Carcikā of the second list, the Tantrasāra (pp. 314, 320) reads Candikā or Mahālakṣmī. It is not known if they are associated with the eight Bhairavas:

असिताङ्गो रुरुश्चण्डः क्रोधश्चोन्मत्तभैरवः।
कपाली भीषणश्चैव संहारश्चाष्टभैरवाः॥ (ibid., pp. 332f.)

For a list of sixteen Mothers, see Prānatosanī Tantra, p. 146.

[2] See the text of the list edited in Appendix I. The Brhan-Nīla (Patala V) and Prānatosanī (pp. 237-38) Tantras supply a later list of similar nature.

Freedom of the Writers on the Pīṭhas from any Common Tradition.

We have seen that the lists of the Pīṭhas and those of the Devīs and Bhairavas connected with each of them are variously prepared by different authors and have a great deal of discrepancy among them. There was apparently little influence on these writers of something like a recognized tradition about the number of the Pīthas, the names of the deities worshipped at them, and their association with particular limbs of the mother-goddess. Names of the tīrtha, Devī and Bhairava were often fabricated by the writers and the association of a tīrtha with one of Satī's limbs was also determined usually by their individual imagination. The fact that in many cases entire countries are mentioned as Pīthas suggests that the writers had only vague ideas about some of the tīrthas and often took resort to imagination. That medieval writers on the subject of the Pīthas took the greatest liberty in these respects is clearly demonstrated by the sixteenth century Bengali poet Mukundarāma in the Dakṣa-yajña-bhaṅga section of his Caṇḍīmaṅgala. According to an interpolated passage found in some manuscripts of this work, the following nine places are the Pīthas where Satī's limbs fell. (1) Ghātaśilā (between the Kharagpur and Tatanagar Railway Stations on the B N.R.) where Satī's left foot fell and where the Devī is Rukminī (apparently the Sanskritized form of the name of the aboriginal deity Rankiṇī, whose worship is widely prevalent in the Burdwan Division of Bengal and the adjoining region of the west),[1] (2) Yājapura (in Orissa) where the right foot fell and where the Devī is Virajā, (3) Rājabolahāṭa (near Serampur in the Hooghly District) where the left hand fell and where the Devī is Viśālalocanī, (4) Bālidāṅgā (near Dhaniakhali in the Hooghly District) where the right hand fell and where the Devī is Rājeśvarī, (5) Ksīragrāma (near Katwa in the Burdwan District) where the back fell and where the Devī is Yogādyā, (6) Nagarakota where the head fell and where the Devī is Jvālāmukhī, (7) Hiṅglāja (in Baluchistan) where the navel fell,[2] (8) Kāmākhyā where the central part of Satī's body fell and where the Devī is Kāmarūpa-Kāmākhyā, and (9) Vārāṇasī where the chest fell and where the Devī is Viśālākṣī.[3] Needless to say that the unimportant rural deva-sthānas in Rāḍha, such as Rājabolahāta and Bāliḍāngā, received the status of Pītha in the hands of Mukundarāma merely because the poet was originally an inhabitant of the village of Dāmunyā in the Burdwan District. The Pīthanirnaya (in its accepted form), likewise, includes in the list of Pīthas Chittagong, Tipperah, Nalahati, Vakresvara, Kiritakona, Jessore, Kalighat, etc., which are late and unimportant deva-sthānas in Bengal,

[अष्टोत्तरसहस्रन्तु जपेद्भक्तिसमन्वितः ।]

[2] Owing to defect in the text, the name of the Devī at Hiṅglāja cannot be determined.

It is very interesting to note that the name of Kālīghāta near Calcutta is not found in this list prepared in South-west Bengal possibly a little later than the composition of the Candīmangala. The popularity of Kālīghāta is probably later than the foundation of Calcutta by Job Charnock in 1690. Cf. supra, p. 24, note 1. Certain editions of Vamśīdāsa's Manasāmangala, said to be composed in 1570 A.D., has:

एतेक शुनिया हरि वज्रकोट हइया।

Note the non-mention of Kalighat and the differences of this account from the other. Mahal Kalkattā in Sarkār Satgāon is, however, mentioned in the 'Ain-i-Akbari as paying in 1582, together with two other Mauzas, a land revenue of Rs 23,905 (J.A.S B, 1873, p 217).

but omits such important old names as Uḍḍiyāna and Pūrṇagiri. The absence of such celebrated deities as Vindhyavāsinī is also striking. Some obscure names, e g. Maṇiveda, Ratnāvalī, etc., do not appear in the earlier lists. Another feature of the list is that it (in its usually accepted form) not only regards the Devī's hāra (necklace), kuṇḍala (ear-ring) kirīṭa (crown) and nūpura (anklet) as so many of her limbs but, strangely enough, even includes in the same category her manas (mind). The author's knowledge of Sanskrit was probably poor, while the copyists and modifiers of the work could hardly claim any knowledge of the language As a result of this, different versions of the text before us are full of discrepancies and mistakes often of an extremely baffling nature. In some manuscripts of the work the text is found in an exceptionally modified form. It will be interesting to compare the probable original text of the Pīṭhanirṇaya (reconstructed on the basis of Manuscript G and the Annadāmaṅgala) with the late modification in Manuscript H both quoted in Appendix I (A and B).

The List of Pīṭhas in the Pīṭhanirṇaya (Mahāpīṭhanirūpaṇa).

Reserving for the foot-notes on the text discussion on the discrepancies as regards the names of the Pīthas, the Pītha-devatās (forms of the Devī), the Kṣetrādhīśas (Bhairavas) and the Devī's aṅga-pratyaṅga (limbs including ornaments, etc.), the descriptive list supplied by the Pīṭhanirṇaya (Mahāpīṭhanirūpaṇa) may be offered in a tabular form.

[1] For Manibandha, a name created out of a confused text, and for Magadha and Karnāta, interpolated by later modifiers of the text who could not make out 51 names from the text before them, see foot-notes on the text. Bhāratacandra omitted the last eight names together with Vārānasī and Kanyāśrama but recognized the fictitious Manibandha, while our G text omits only the last eight names and thus makes the number of Pīthas 52 (with Vārānasī and Kanyāśrama and with the extra nine Pīthas located at Kāmarūpa). It seems that the original text made a reference either to Kanyāśrama or to Vārānasī. The fifth Patala of the late Brhan-Nīlatantra contains no less than five lists of Pīthas Four out of them together with another from the sixth Patala of the same Tantra have already been quoted (see above, pp. 21, note 1; 25, note 3, 28, note 2). A list like the following one quoted from the Brhan-Nīla may be regarded as the source of the belief, prevalent in some parts of Bengal, that the number of Pīthas is fifty-two (cf. our G text enumerating fifty-two Pīthas owing to confusion) has been analyzed by N. N. Vasu in the Viśvakośa, s.v. pīṭha. This work supplies a list of 51 Mahā-Pīthas (great Pīthas) and another of 26 Upa-Pīṭhas (Pīthas of lesser importance). Although the word upapīṭha is traced in such works as the Sādhanamālā (p 479), no early lists of the less important Pīthas are known to us. The Śivacarita closely follows the text of the Pīthanirnaya in regard to 41 (actually 42, but the name Maṇibandha is due to textual confusion) out of the 51 great Pīthas, the remaining 10 names as given in the latter not being found in that work. It is interesting to note in this connection that Bhāratacandra, who mentions 42 Pīthas (including Maṇibandha) by name and locates 10 Pīṭhas at one of them to make the number 51, closely follows in his Annadāmaṅgala the readings of the Śivacarita in spite of his avowed indebtedness to the Mantracūdāmani (for Tantracūdāmani) Tantra. These facts suggests that the original text of the Pīthanirnaya actually but partially followed the Kubjikā Tantra in offering only the names of 42 Pīthas, while the number of the Pīthas was made 51 by locating the ten Mahāvidyās (manifestations of Śakti conceived in imitation of the Daśāvatāra of Viṣnu) at Kāmarūpa. If such was the case, it is tempting to suggest that some verses containing the names of certain obscure Pīthas especially in the concluding part of the Pīṭhanirnaya text (cf. verses 48–55) were added to the original text at a later date They may have been inspired and influenced by the Śivacarita. The above suggestion seems to be strongly supported by the fact that verses 48–55 of our Pīṭhanirnaya text containing the names of Nalāhāṭī, Kālīghāta, Vakreśvara, Yaśora, Aṭṭahāsa, Nandīpura, Laṅkā and Virātadeśa (including the variants Karnāṭa and Magadha) are conspicuous by their absence from some manuscripts of the Pīṭhanirṇaya; cf. our G text.

The evidence of the Annadāmaṅgala has been quoted in the foot-notes on the text of the Pīṭhanirnaya, while the descriptive list of the Śivacarita is offered below in a tabular form.

The subjoined text of the Pīthanirnaya (Mahāpīthanirūpana) is based upon the following sources

A—Manuscript No. 196, entitled Pīthanirnaya (and probably also Mahāpīthalakṣana), in the Government Collection of the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengal.

[1] D (v l.) EGI—शर्करारे ।

AM— शर्करारे तिन चक्षु त्रिगुणभैरव (वैभव) ।
महिषमर्दिनी देवी क्रोधीश भैरव ॥

Karavīra or Karavīrapura is often identified with Śarkarāra which is supposed to be no other than modern Sukkur, the chief city of the District of that name in Sind. According to the Kālikā Purāna (chs 38-39), Karavīrapura was the capital of the Brahmāvarta country (Eastern Punjab) and was situated near the river Drsadvatī; but the city is usually identified with Kolhapur (locally called Karvir) in the Bombay Presidency.

The elaboration of the text in E seems to be a later modification of the original

AM— सुगन्धाय नासिका पड़िल चक्रदृता ।

The Pītha is located at Shikārpur (about 13 miles to the north of Barisal in the Buckergunge District) on the Sondha (Sugandhā) The temple of Tryambakeśvara stands at Ponābālā-Sāmrāil (about 3 miles to the south of Jhālakāti) on the same stream

AM— काश्मीरेते कण्ठ देवी महामाया ताय ।
त्रिसन्ध्य-ईश्वर नाम भैरव तथाय ॥

As there is no reference to the celebrated Śāradā (Saidi) and Amaranātha tīrthas of Kāshmīr, there seems to be a fantastic element in the description of this Pītha

[6] A—स्त्रीः ।

AM— ज्वालामुखे जिह्वा ताहे अग्नि अनुभव ।
देवीर अम्बिका नाम उन्मत्त भैरव ॥

This seems to suggest the reading अम्बिका सिद्धिदा देवी । Jvālāmukhī (lat 31° N , long 76° E.) lies in the Kangra District of the Punjab.

Jālandhara (lat. 31° N, long 75° E) is the chief city of the Jullundur District of the East Punjab But the Pīṭha is located near Jvālāmukhī.

Vaidyanātha is the same as Deoghar-Vaidyanathdham (lat. 86° E, long. 24° N.) in the Santal Parganas District of Bihar

[3] DE—जानुनी मम ।

AM— नेपाले दक्षिण जङ्घा कपाली भैरव ।
देवी ताथ महामाया सदा महोत्सव ॥

The non-mention of Paśupatināṭha, the most famous deity in Nepal, in this connection seems to expose the imaginary character of the description.

[4] I—°हस्त; ABC—मालवे दक्षहस्त; F—मालवे; G—दाक्षायणी हरिः ।

AM— आर अर्द्ध डानि हस्त मानसरोवरे ।
देवी दाक्षायणी हर भैरव विहरे ॥

AM suggests the reading हरः and the omission of the second half of the verse. The Mānasa lake (lat 30° N., long. 81° E), the source of the river Śatadru (Satlej), is in the Himalayas. Since Ujjayinī, a city in Mālava, is separately mentioned (v. 16), मानसे appears to be the reading intended. But nothing can be said definitely as Ujjayinī in this case may actually represent a village of Bengal. It is, however, to be noted that the celebrated god Mahākāla (Śiva) is not mentioned in connection either with Ujjayinī or with Mālava. Mālava is modern Malwa, but the name often indicated East Malwa of which the ancient capital was Vidiśā (modern Besnāgar in the Gwalior State).

[5] ABCF—नाभिदेशस्तु; I—°देशश्च ।

G— विरजा चोत्कले ख्याता नाभिर्मे मम(जय ?) भैरवः ।
गण्डक्यां गण्डकी(गण्डकः?) चण्डी जगन्नाथस्तु भैरवः ॥

Although not free from mistake, this probably points to the original reading of verses 13-14. For elaboration of the earlier text as a later trait, cf. p 44, note 3.

गण्डक्यां [1] गण्डपातश्च तत्र सिद्धिर्न संशयः ।
तत्र सा [2] गण्डकी चण्डी चक्रपाणिस्तु भैरवः ॥ १४ ॥]

AM— उत्कले पड़िल नाभि मोच्च याद्दा सेवि ।
जय नामे भैरव विजया नामे देवी ॥

AM suggests the reading विजया सा महादेवी जयनामा तु भैरवः । or विजया चोत्कले ख्याता नाभिर्मे जयभैरवः ॥

Virajā or Virajāksetra is identical with modern Jājpur (lat. 20° N., long. 86° E.) in the Cuttack District of Orissa.

Cf. ततो वैतरणीं गच्छेत् सर्वपापप्रमोचनीम् ।
विरज तीर्थमासाद्य विराजति यथा शशी ॥
(महाभारत ।३।८५।६)

The name of the Bhairava in the modified text is apparently borrowed from the god Jagannātha at Purī and probably hints at an attempt of claiming that deity to be a manifestation of Śiva.

[1] B—गण्डके गण्डपातश्च; E—गण्डपातश्च; I—गण्डक्यां गण्डकी चण्डी चक्रपाणिस्तु भैरवः ।

AM— गण्डकीते डानि गण्ड पड़े चक्रधाय ।
चक्रपाणि भैरव गण्डकी चण्डी नाथ ॥

This suggests the reading गण्डक्यां दक्षगण्डश्च । The Gandakī (modern Gandak) is a tributary of the Ganges and meets the latter river near Bakhtyarpur in Bihar. The Pītha has been located at Śālagrāma at the source of the Gandak.

[2] A—सा तत्र ।

AM— बाऊलाय वामबाऊ फेलिला केश्रव ।

AM suggests the reading बाऊलायां वामबाऊर्बाऊलाख्या । The Pītha is located at Ketugrāma near Katwa in the Burdwan District.

[4] A—उज्जन्यां कर्परश्चैव; B—उज्जैन्यां कुपरश्चापि; G—उर्ज्जयिन्यां कुपरश्च माङ्गले (मङ्गला ?); I—तर्ज्जन्यां च कार्पूरं माङ्गले कपिलेश्वर ।

AM— उजानीते कफोनि मङ्गलचण्डी देवी ।
भैरव कपिलाम्बर शुभ थाँरे सेवि ॥

AM seems to refer to Ujānī or Kogrām in the Burdwan District of Bengal, although Ujjayinī (modern Ujjain) in the early lists of Pīthas must be identified with the famous city in Avantī or West Mālava, now lying in the Gwalior State in Western India. Note that the name of the Bhairava is not Mahākāla who is known to have been the tutelary deity of Ujjayinī. The 12 jyotirlingas as enumerated in the Śiva Purāna (I, 38, 17–20) are Somanātha in Saurāstra, Mallikārjuna on the Śrīśaila, Mahākāla at Ujjayinī, Onkāra at Amareśvara, Kedāra in the Himalayas, Bhīmaśankara at Dākinī

Cf. pp. 44, note 3, 45, note 5

[1] BDEFI—तत्र ।

AM— चट्टग्रामे डानिहस्त बाहु अनुभव ।
भवानी देवता चन्द्रशेखर भैरव ॥

The Pīṭha is located at the Sītākunda on the Chandranath hill in the Chittagong District of East Bengal.

[2] D (v.l.) E—देवता त्रिपुरा मता; G—देवता त्रिपुरा नलः ।

AM— दक्षिण चरणखानि पड़े त्रिपुराय ।
नल नामे भैरव त्रिपुरा देवी ताय ॥

The original reading was apparently त्रिपुरायां दक्षपादो देवता त्रिपुरा नलः with the second line of the verse omitted (cf. p. 46, note 4). The Pīṭha is located at Radhakishorepur (old Rāṅgāmāṭi or Udaypur) in the Tripurā (Hill Tipperah) State in Bengal. The city of Tripura or Tripurī, mentioned in early literature, has, however, to be identified with modern Tewar near Jubbulpur in the Central Province. The temple of the goddess at Radhakishorepur was built by king Dharmamāṇikya in Śaka 1423 (1501 A D.).

[3] A—°स्त्रिपुराश्च । See the Śivacarita, AM, and the G text which speak of the Bhairava as Nala (cf. note 2 above).

[4] E—°फलप्रदः ।

[5] DEG—भैरवोऽम्बरः; I—भैरवाम्बरः ।

AM— तिरोताय पड़े वामपद मनोहर ।
भ्रामरी देवता ताहे भैरव भ्रमर ॥

AM suggests the reading तिरोतायां वामपादश्चामरी भैरवोऽमरः । It is interesting to note that the word tirotā stands for Sanskrit strī in the Assamese language. But AM here follows the Śivacarita passage referring to Trihuta (Sans. Tīrabhukti), modern Tirhut or North Bihar. Trisrotā is of course the modern Tista, a tributary of the Brahmaputra or Yamunā The Pīṭha is located at Sālbāri in the Jalpaiguri District.

प्रचण्डचण्डिका तत्र मातङ्गी त्रिपुराम्बिका[2] ।
वगला कमला तत्र भुवनेशी सधूमिनी[3] ॥ २२ ॥

AM suggests the reading साक्षाद् रामानन्दोऽथ or साक्षाद् रावानन्दोऽथ । The Kāmarūpa Pītha has been located near Gauhaṭi in Assam. The homage paid by certain early rulers of Assam to Kāmeśvara and Mahāgaurī (Kāmākhyā) seems to point to the old name of the Bhairava at the Kāmarūpa Pīṭha.

[1] ABCE—नक्षत्रदेवता; D—न क्षेत्रदेवता; GI—यत्र च भैरवी देवी यत्र नक्षत्रदेवता ।

Kāmagiri in Kāmarūpa is represented as the seat of the ten Mahāvidyās whose names are given as Bhairavī, Kāmākhyā (Kṣetradevatā), Pracaṇḍacaṇḍikā (i.e Chinnamastā; cf. Tantrasāra, pp 802ff.), Mātaṅgī, Tripurā, Ambikā, Vagalā, Bhuvaneśī (Bhuvaneśvarī) and Dhūminī (Dhūmāvatī). The usually recognized names of the Mahāvidyās (a late medieval Śākta adaptation of the Daśāvatāra conception) are however Kālī, Tārā, Ṣoḍaśī, Bhuvaneśvarī, Bhairavī, Chinnamastā, Dhūmāvatī, Vagalā, Mātaṅgī and Kamalā (the Bṛhaddharma P., II, 6, 126, having Sundarī for Kamalā and Bagalāmukhī for Bagalā). Cf.

काली तारा महाविद्या षोडशी भुवनेश्वरी ।
भैरवी छिन्नमस्ता च विद्या धूमावती तथा ।
वगला सिद्धविद्या च मातङ्गी कमलात्मिका ॥ referred to the Cāmuṇḍā Tantra in the Śabdakalpadruma, s.v., and to the Muṇḍamālā Tantra (cf. Des. Cat. Sans. MSS., R.A.S.B., VIII, p. 164) in the Tantrasāra (p. 14). Only some of the names are common to the two lists. That, however, there was no unanimity about the names of the ten Mahāvidyās is demonstrated by another list quoted from the Mālinīvijaya in the Tantrasāra (loc. cit.):

काली नीला महादुर्गा त्वरिता छिन्नमस्तका ।
वाग्वादिनी चान्नपूर्णा तथा प्रत्यङ्गिरा पुनः ॥
कामाख्यावासिनी बाला मातङ्गी शैलवासिनी ॥

This list agrees with that of the Pīṭhanirṇaya in recognizing Kāmākhyāvāsinī or Kāmākhyā as one of the ten Mahāvidyās. The name Pracaṇḍacaṇḍikā, recognized by the Pīṭhanirṇaya, is found in the following list of the ten Mahāvidyās quoted from the Tantracintāmaṇi in Des Cat. Sans MSS, R.A.S.B., VIII, p. 388 (1) Śyāmā (Kālī), (2) Tārā, (3) Pracaṇḍacaṇḍikā, (4) Śrī (Kamalā), (5) Bhairavī, (6) Mahālakṣmī, (7) Mātaṅgī, (8) Bhuvaneśvarī, (9) Dhūmāvatī, and (10) Vagalā. An interesting list of the Mahāvidyās in the Guhyātiguhya Tantra (Des Cat., p. 206) identifies the manifestations of the mother-goddess with the ten Avatāras of Viṣṇu :

कृष्णमूर्तिः कालिका स्याद् राममूर्तिस्तु तारिणी ।
छिन्नमस्ता नृसिंहः स्याद् वामनो भुवनेश्वरी ॥
जामदग्न्य सुन्दरी स्यान्मीनो धूमावती भवेत् ।
बाला(वगला ?) कूर्ममूर्तिः स्याद्बल्लभद्रश्च भैरवी ॥
महालक्ष्मीर्भवेद्बुद्धो दुर्गा स्यात् कल्किरूपिणी ।
स्वयं भगवती काली कृष्णस्तु भगवान् स्वयं ॥

Cf Mahālakṣmī and Durgā for Kamalā and Mātaṅgī. The Tantracintāmaṇi (ibid., p 385) also says, कालिकाकृष्णयोस्तारारामयोश्चैकरूपता । The Muṇḍamālā list of the Mahāvidyās quoted in the Tantrasāra is elsewhere (ibid, p. 580) ascribed to the Viśvasāra or the Cāmuṇḍā Tantra.

[10] C—°विस्तार ।

[11] A—°मिच्छन्ति; I—शरणमिच्छन्ति ।

[12] G—पुनर्म्लानुषादयः । C adds here: इति कामरूपमाहात्म्यम् । It is probable that some of the verses in the description of the Kāmarūpa Pīṭha were a later addition. F reads verses 26-27 after verse 28.

[13] AFG—क्षीरकण्डकः; I—क्षीरखण्डज ।

AM— क्षीरग्रामे डाकिनीपार दक्षाङ्गुष्ठवैभव ।
युगाद्या देवता क्षीरखण्डक भैरव ॥

AM suggests the reading

क्षीरग्रामे महादेव-भैरवः क्षीरखण्डकः ।
युगाद्या सा महामाया दक्षाङ्गुष्ठ पदो मम ॥

The Pīṭha is located at Khīragrām near Katwa in the Burdwan District. Cf. note 14 infra. B has for verses 26-27.

भूतधात्री महामाया वामपदाङ्गुली मम ।
नकुलीशः कालीपीठे दक्षपदाङ्गुलो मम ॥

[14] A—युगाद्या सा महामाया दक्षाङ्गुष्ठपदौ; F—युगाद्या सा महादेव दक्षाङ्गुष्ठः; BCDE—युगाद्यायां महादेव; G—युगाद्या सा नदादेवी दक्षाङ्गुष्ठे; I—महादेवी दक्षांगुष्ठपदे ।

The Candīmaṅgala mentions the goddess as Yogādyā and connects Kṣīragrāma with Satī's back. For the goddess Yogādyā at Kṣīragrāma, see also Des. Cat. Vernacular MSS. in the collection of the R.A.S.B., IX (Bengali MSS.), pp. 317-18 (Nos. 318, 5372).

---

[1] G—महामाया ; I—महालक्ष्मी च ।

[2] E—शम्बरानन्दो ; G—कचः स्थितः ।

AM— श्रीहट्टे पड़िल ग्रीवा महालक्ष्मी देवी ।
सर्वानन्द भैरव वैभव यांहा सेवि ॥.

AM therefore suggests the readings श्रीहट्टे and सर्वानन्दश्च in places respectively of श्रीशैले and सम्बरानन्दो ; cf. Śivacarita (p. 40, Nos. 5, 14). As Śrīparvata, probably identical with Śrīśaila, is separately mentioned in verse 41, the reference in this case may actually be to Śrihaṭṭa (modern Sylhet) in East Pakistan. The Pīṭha is located at Gotatikar-Jainpur near Sylhet. The expression देशे देशे is not quite happy.

[3] G—कङ्कालो भैरवो रुरुनामतः ; I—काञ्चिदेशे च कङ्कालि भैरवो रुरुनामतः ।

[4] A—वेदगर्भाख्या ।

AM— काञ्चीदेशे पड़िल काँकालि अभिराम ।
देवगर्भा देवता भैरव रुरु नाम ॥

Kāñcī, mentioned in the early lists, certainly stands for modern Conjeeveram in the Chingleput District of the Madras Presidency. The Pīṭha in this case, however, is usually located on the Kopāi near Bolpur in the Birbhum District of Bengal.

[5] A—नितम्बं ; B—नितम्ब कालमागधे ; I—नितम्बकालिमाधवे ।

AM— नितम्बेर अर्द्ध कालमाधवे नाँहार ।
असिताङ्ग भैरव देवता काली तार ॥

[6] E—च सुसिद्धिदा ; G—भैरवोऽसिताङ्गश्च ।

[7] A—दृष्टादृष्ट ; G—दृष्टादृष्टा ।

[8] ABEGI—महादेव ।

[9] This verse is omitted in CF and may be a later interpolation.

शोणाख्या [1] भद्रसेनस्तु नर्मदाख्ये [2] नितम्बकः ।
रामगिरौ [3] स्तनान्यश्च [4] शिवानी चण्डभैरवः ॥ ३७ ॥
[वृन्दावने केशजालमुमा [5] नाम्नी च [6] देवता] ।
[भूतेशो भैरवस्तत्र सर्वसिद्धिप्रदायकः] ॥ ३८ ॥
संहाराख्ये [7] ऊर्द्धदन्तो [8] देवी (°ऽनले) नारायणी शुचौ ।
अधोदन्तो [9] महारुद्रो वाराही पञ्चसागरे ॥ ३९ ॥

---

[1] AFG—शोणाख्ये, I—शैलाख्ये; B—शोणभद्रे भद्रसेनो ।

AM— नितम्बेर आर अर्द्ध पड़े नर्मदाय ।
भद्रसेन भैरव शोणाक्षी देवी ताय ॥

AM suggests the reading शोणाक्षी भद्रसेनस्तु । There is some doubt whether the Pīṭha has to be located on the Sone or on the Narmada.

[2] BCD—नर्मदाख्या नितम्बके; F—नर्मदाख्या नितम्बकम्; G—नर्मदाख्ये नितम्बके; I—नम्मदाख्ये नितम्बके ।

[3] B—राजगिरौ, G—रामाकिन्यां; I—रामगिर्य्यां । Rāmagiri is modern Ramtek near Nagpur in the Central Province. There is also a tradition identifying Rāmagir with the Chitrakūṭa in Bundelkhand.

[4] AB—तथा नासा; CDF—तथा नाला; I—स्तुवान्यश्च ।

AM— आर स्तन पड़े ताँर रामगिरि स्थाने ।
शिवानी देवता चण्ड भैरव सेखाने ॥

Note that the nose of Satī is associated in verse 5 (p. 44 above) with Sugandhā.

[5] B—°जालान्; CD—°जाल; EF—°जाले; G—उमानाम्नी केशजाले भूतेशः परभैरवः (with the second line of the verse omitted)

I— वृन्दावने केशजाले कृष्णनाथस्तु भैरवः ।
कात्यायनी तत्र देवी सर्वसिद्धिप्रदायिनी ॥

AM— केशजाल नाम स्थाने पड़े ताँर केश ।
उमा नामे देवी ताहे भैरव भूतेश ॥

It seems that the original reading was उमावने केशजाल भूतेशः परभैरवः ॥ Umāvana was a name of Devikotta, cf. style of v. 27 (supra, p 50, notes 1 and 3). AM supports the reading in G. In the modified text there is reference to the fanciful Śākta claim on the celebrated Vaiṣnava tīrtha near Mathurā (Muttra) in the United Provinces (cf. Kṛṣna referred to in the I text). Kesajāla was sometimes regarded as the name of the Pīṭha owing to confusion, cf. the case of Manibandha in verse 32. See the confusion in the Śivacarita.

[6] A—नाम्नीति ।

[7] ABI—सहाराख्ये ।

AM— ऊर्द्ध दन्तपाँतिर अनले हइल धाम ।
सक्रूर भैरव देवी नारायणी नाम ॥

AM suggests the reading संक्रूराख्य ऊर्द्धदन्तोऽनले । The Śivacarita regards Saṃhāra as the name of an Upapīṭha; cf. ABI.

[8] ACFGI—ऊर्द्धदन्ते ।

[9] ACFGI—अधोदन्ते ।

करतोयातटे तल्पं (कर्णे) वामे[1] वामनभैरवः ।

अपर्णा देवता यत्र ब्रह्मरूपाकरोद्भवा[2] ॥ ४० ॥

श्रीपर्वते दक्षगुल्फ(कर्ण)स्त्वच[3] श्रीसुन्दरी परा ।

सर्वसिद्धीश्वरी[4] सर्वा सुन्दरानन्दभैरवः[5] ॥ ४१ ॥

कपालिनी (कपाली च) भीमरूपा वामगुल्फो[6] विभाषके ।

[7] [भैरवश्च महादेव सर्वानन्दः शुभप्रदः] ॥ ४२ ॥

AM— पञ्चसागरेते पड़े अधोदन्तसार ।

महारुद्र भैरव वाराही देवी ताँर ॥

Pañcasāgara seems to indicate the oceans, the traditional number of which was, however, four or seven. The reference may also be to the five Kundas near Hardwar.

[1] B—तन्यात् बलि°; G—गुल्फ; I—तल्प ।

AM— करतोयातटे पड़े वामकर्ण ताँर ।

वामेश्र भैरव देवी अपर्णा ताँहार ॥

AM suggests the reading कर्णे वामे वामेशभैरवः । The Karatoyā is a sacred river of northern Bengal. The Pītha is located at Bhavānīpur in the Bogra District. G has a note reading भवानीपुरख्याते ।

[2] A—°करोद्भवः; I—तत्र । The last word of the verse is not quite satisfactory.

[3] ACI—गुल्फं; E—तल्पं; FG—गुल्फ तत्र ।

AM— श्रीपर्वते डानि कर्ण फेल्लिलेन हरि ।

भैरव सुन्दरानन्द देवता सुन्दरी ॥

AM suggests the reading दक्षकर्णस् तत्र । Śrīparvata is the same as the Śrīśaila in the Nallamalur range to the south of the Krishna. But the non-mention of Mallikārjuna (Śiva) and of Devī Bhramarāmbā on the Śrīśaila shows that the description is probably fantastic. As two other places are associated with Satī's gulpha (verses 31 and 42), AM possibly suggests the correct reading of the verse.

[4] ABGI—°सिद्धेश्वरी; E—°सिद्धिकरी ।

[5] CDF—सुनन्दानन्द° ।

[6] C—गुल्फ; DI—गुल्फे; B—गुल्फा; F—गुल्फविभागतः; G—कपालिनी क्रोधरूपा वामगुल्फे विभीषके ।

AM— विभाषेते वाम गुल्फ फेल्लिला केशव ।

भीमरूपा देवी ताहे कपाली भैरव ॥

AM suggests the reading कपाली च भीमरूपा and the omission of the second line of the verse (cf. p. 50, note 7). The Pītha is located near Tamluk in the Midnapur District.

[7] This line is omitted in ABE and may be a later interpolation. Cf p. 50, notes 3 and 7.

उदरच्च (अधरच्च) प्रभासे मे[1] चन्द्रभागा यशस्विनी।

वक्रतुण्डो भैरव-

श्चोर्द्धोष्ठो भैरवपर्वते[2] ॥ ४३ ॥

अवन्ती[3] च महादेवी लम्बकर्णास्तु भैरवः ॥ ४४ ॥

चिबुके[4] भ्रामरी देवी विकृताक्षो[5] जले स्थले (जनस्थाने)[6]।

गण्डो गोदावरीतीरे विश्वेशी (विश्वेशो) विश्वमातृका[7] ॥ ४५ ॥

---

[1] A—प्रभाषमे; BCDE—प्रभाषे; G—अधरंच्च प्रभाषे मे चन्द्राभागा; I—अधरच्च।

AM— प्रभासे अधर देवी चन्द्रभागा ताहे।

वक्रतुण्ड भैरव प्रत्यक्षरूप याहे॥

AM suggests the reading अधरच्च प्रभासे; of, verse 52 below. Prabhāsa or Somnath is a famous holy place in southern Kathiawar.

[2] B—श्चोष्ठो भैरवपर्वते; A—जर्द्धोष्ठ भौरवपर्वते; G—तुण्ड भैरवपर्वते; I—तुण्डो भैरव°।

AM— भैरव पर्वते ओष्ठ पड़े चक्रघाय।

नग्नकर्ण भैरव अवन्ती देवी ताय॥

AM suggests the reading नग्नकर्णस्तु भैरवः। The Devī's name seems to refer the Pitha to West Malwa.

[3] ABCDFI—अवन्त्यां।

[4] ABC—चित्रके।

[5] ABFG—विकृताक्षा; I—विकृताक्ष; C—किकुभाक्षा; D—किकृभाक्षो। Probably विकृताक्षो is intended.

[6] AM— जनस्थाने चिबुक पडिल अभिराम।

विकृताक्ष भैरव भ्रामरी देवी नाम॥

AM suggests the reading विकृताक्षो जनस्थाने। Janasthāna, celebrated in the Rāmāyana, lay in the upper Godavari valley in the present Nasik region of the Bombay Presidency. CDF read after this verse: भैरवः सर्वसिद्धोश्च सिद्धिरनुत्तमा apparently because the reading विकृताक्षा invited a name of the Bhairava at the Pīṭha.

[7] I—गण्डे;

AM— गोदावरी तीरे पड़े वाम गण्डखानि।

विश्वेश भैरव विश्वमातृका भवानी॥

AM suggests the reading विश्वेशो विश्वमातृका which shows that verse 46 is probably an interpolation. The reading विश्वेशी necessitated the fabrication of the name of the Bhairava at the Pīṭha. The two lines of verse 46 appear to have been inserted by two different hands. Cf. p. 56, note 8.

[दक्षपार्श्वभैरवस्तु[1] वामगण्डे तु[2] राकिणी ।
[3]भैरवो वत्सनाभस्तु तत्र सिद्धिर्न संशयः[4] ॥ ४६ ॥]
रत्नावल्यां (रत्नवत्यां) दक्षस्कन्धः कुमारी भैरवः शिवः[5] ।
मिथिलायामुमा देवी[6] वामस्कन्धो[7] महोदरः[8] ॥ ४७ ॥
[9] [नलाहाख्यां नलापातो योगीशो[10] भैरवस्तथा ।
तत्र सा कालिका देवी सर्वसिद्धिप्रदायिका[11] ॥ ४८ ॥
[12]कालीघाटे मुण्डपातः क्रोधीशो[13] भैरवस्तथा ।
देवता जयदुर्गाख्या नानाभोगप्रदायिनी ॥ ४९ ॥

---

[1] A—दक्षपार्णि; G—भैरवश्च वामगण्डे च । Rākinī is the same as Raṅkinī, cf supra, p. 33 and note 1.

[2] I—च । For the right cheek, see verse 14 (p. 46) above.

[3] D(v.l.)E read in place of this line· श्यामायी भैरवो वत्स सर्वशैलात्मकोपरि । The reference to Sarvaśaila (literally, all hills) is no doubt fanciful; cf Pañcasāgara.

[4] B—वत्सनाभश्च तत्र सिद्धिमवाप्नुयात्; GI—वसामि भैरवो वत्स सर्वशैलाख्यगोमिथः (I—°गोविषः)।

[5] G—रत्नवत्यां दक्षस्कन्धः कुमारो भैरवी शिवा। I—रत्नावल्यां दक्षिणस्कन्धः कुमारी भैरवी शिव।

AM— रत्नावली स्थाने डानि स्कन्ध अभिराम ।
कुमार भैरव ताहे देवी शिवा नाम ॥

AM suggests the reading कुमारो भैरवो शिवा as in G. A city called Ratnavatī is mentioned in the Kāvyamīmāmsā; but probably Khanakul-Krishnanagar, on the river Ratnākara (Kānānadī) in the Hooghly District and famous for its temple of Ghanteśvara Śiva, is indicated. Cf. also the Pramodā tīrtha at the confluence of the Vāgmatī and the Ratnāvalī in Nepal.

[6] A—नाम्नी; CFI—महादेवी; G—मिथिलायां वामस्कन्धो महादेवी महोदरी ।

AM— मिथिलाय वामस्कन्ध देवी महादेवी ।
महोदर भैरव सर्वार्थ याँरे सेवि ॥

AM supports the reading in G with महोदरः for महोदरी । Mithilā has been identified with Janakpur in the Nepalese Tarai.

[7] ABE—स्कन्दो; CFI—स्कन्धे ।

[8] D—महोदरे। I reads after this line भैरवो वत्सनाभस्तु तत्र सिद्धिर्न संशय' (vide verse 46).

[9] The following eight verses are not found in G (and the AM original) and were apparently interpolated.

[10] EI—योगेशो । The Pīṭha is located at Nalahati in the Birbhum District of West Bengal. The word nalā is a Bengali corruption of Sanskrit nalaka (any long bone)

[11] B—तत्र सिद्धिर्न संशयः ।

[12] Verse 49 is omitted in I. DEF have in place of this line: कर्णाटे चैव कर्णो (v.l. कर्णं) मे श्रुतीश(v.l. त्रुतीश) नाम भैरवः । Cf. verse 27 (p 50) above. This Kālī Pīṭha is located at Juranpur near Katwa in the Burdwan District. The Pīṭha was not mentioned in the original text.

[13] D (v.l.)—क्रोधेशो; B—क्रोधश्च ।

वक्रेश्वरे मनःपातो वक्रनाथस्तु भैरवः । [1]

नदी पापहरा तत्र देवी महिषमर्दिनी ॥ ५० ॥

यशोरे पाणिपद्मञ्च देवता यशोरेश्वरी ।

चण्डश्च [2] भैरवो यत्र तत्र सिद्धिर्न संशयः [3] ॥ ५१ ॥

लङ्कायां नूपुरञ्चैव भैरवो राक्षसेश्वरः । [6]

इन्द्राक्षी देवता तत्र इन्द्रेणोपासिता पुरा ॥ ५४ ॥

विराटदेशमध्ये तु [7] पादाङ्गुलिनिपातनम् ।

भैरवश्चामृताख्यश्च [8] देवी तत्राम्बिका स्मृता ॥ ५५ ॥ [9]]

---

[1] I—मुण्डपात । The Pīṭha, which had no mention in the original text, is located near Dubrajpur in the Birbhum District. The Śivacarita separately mentions Vakreśvara and Vakranātha, which, however, appear to be the same place.

[2] A—चण्डस्तु; BF—चण्डश्च भैरवस्तत्र; I—चण्डेशो भैरवो देवस्तत्र ।

[3] I—सिद्धिरवाप्नुयात्, BE—तत्र सिद्धिमवाप्नुयात्; CF—यत्र सिद्धिमवाप्नुयात् । The Yaśora Pīṭha is located at Iśvarīpur (about 25 miles from the Hasanabad Railway Station) in the Khulna District and not actually at Jessore

[4] C—विश्वेशो । The Pīṭha, which was not mentioned in the original text, is located near Lābhpur in the Birbhum District.

[5] BCDEFI—सिद्धिर्न संशयः । The Pīṭha is located near Santhia in the Birbhum District.

[6] I—नन्दिकेश्वरः । The name of the Bhairava suggests that this Laṅkā is identical with Ceylon, although the author may have had no knowledge of the Ceylonese tīrthas. Laṅkā (literally, an island) was not referred to in the original text.

[7] A—विराट मध्यदेशे तु; I—°निपातनः । The ancient Virāta or Matsya country lay in the Jaipur-Alwar-Bharatpur region of Rajputana; but late medieval writers often placed a Virāta country in northern Bengal (cf. I.C., VIII, pp. 53-54). This Pīṭha had no place in the original text.

[8] AE—चामृताख्यश्च; I—भैरवोऽमृताख्यश्च ।

[9] D (v.l.) EF add after this verse.

मगधे (v.l. मागधे) दक्षजङ्घा मे व्योमकेशस्तु भैरव' ।

सर्वानन्दमयी (v.l. °करी) देवी सर्वकाम(v.l. सर्वानन्द)फलप्रदा ॥

This verse was fabricated by one who could not find out all the 51 Pīṭhas owing to errors in the manuscripts consulted; cf. the case of Karnāta (p 56, note 12).

[1] A—पीठनाथादि°; G—एतत्ते कथित वत्स पीठनाथादि°; I—एतत्ते कथित।

[2] D—क्षेत्राधीश; G—क्षेत्राधीश विना यस्तु; I—क्षेत्राधीश विना देवि।

[3] CDF—पूजयेच्चान्य°।

[4] G—जपपूजादिक धनम्; I—भैरवे हृदय सर्व।

[5] BCDE—पीठ; A—भैरवपीठ; G—पीठ पीठशक्ति; I—अज्ञत्वा भैरवं पीठ।

[6] A—सिध्यन्ति; B—सिद्धे तु; CEG—सिध्येत; I—सिद्धेत।

EI—दद्यात् शान्ताय शिष्याय नैष्ठिकाय शुचौ प्रिये (I—धिरे)।

G supports the reading of E with शिष्याय शान्ताय for शान्ताय शिष्याय and शुचि for शुचौ
Here is an attempt to make a complete verse in the anuṣṭubh out of a half verse. Simular cases are also noticed elsewhere in the text. Cf. pp. 44, note 3; 45, note 5, etc.

[10] Colophon: A—इति तन्त्रचूडामणौ पार्वतीशिवसवादे एकपञ्चाशद्विद्योत्पत्तौ पीठनिर्णयः समाप्त; B—इति तन्त्रचूडामणौ शिवपार्वतीसवादे महापीठनिरूपण समाप्त; C—goes on to quote some verses of the Mahānīlatantra; E—इति तन्त्रचूडामणौ शिवपार्वतीसवादे एकपञ्चाशद् विद्योत्पत्तौ पीठनिर्णयः समाप्तः। G—इति चन्द्रचूडामणितन्त्रे (cf. p 42, note 2 पार्वतीशिवसवादे विद्योत्पत्तौ पीठनिर्णयः समाप्तः। श्रीदुर्गा। श्रीरमानाथशर्मणः पुस्तकमिदम्। H—इति श्रीभावचूडामणौ षट्कर्मसाधनविधौ पीठनिर्णयः पटलः। I—इति तन्त्रचूडामणौ विद्यात्पत्तौ (विद्यो°) पीठनिर्णय समाप्तं॥ ॐ नमः परमदेवतायै। शुभमस्तु शकाब्दाः १७।९० (१७९०) सन १२।४५ (१२४५) साल तारिख १४ भाद्रस्य श्रीकालीनाथदेवशर्मण स्वाक्षरं पुस्तकञ्च॥ श्रीश्रीविश्वेश्वराय नमः। श्रीश्रीदुर्गा।

It has been noted above that the Tripurā Rājamālā says about a verse of our text: शिववाक्य पीठमाला तन्त्रेर प्रमाण। See p 4, note 1. Note also that Bhāratacandra was aware of the differences of opinion about the Pīthas.

APPENDIX IV

Date of the Tantrasāra

The celebrated Tantric encyclopedia entitled Tantrasāra, composed or rather compiled by the great Bengali leader of Tantric thought named Krsnānanda, is well known to all students of the Tantra literature. In the colophons added to some of the chapters of the Tantrasāra the author calls himself 'Mahāmahopādhyāya-Kṛṣṇānanda-Vāgīśa-Bhattācārya'; but later writers usually refer to him as Kṛṣṇānanda Āgamavāgīśa. Vāgīśa seems to have been an abbreviated form of Āgamavāgīśa.

The late Mr. N. N. Vasu gave the following description of the family, to which Krsnānanda Āgamavāgīśa, author of the Tantrasāra, belonged, in the Vārendra-Brāhmana-Vivarana Volume of his Vaṅger Jātiya Itihāsa (in Bengali): 'This family is known in the community of the Vārendra Brāhmanas as the Kāśyapa-gotrīya Maitras of Maṇḍalajānī. It originally flourished at Āgameśvarī-talā at Śrīdhāma-Navadvīpa; but later, owing to an expansion of the family, its members scattered themselves over different parts of Bengal. A branch of the family still lives at Śrīdhāma and is devoted to the worship of the goddess Āgameśvarī' (p. 157). A number of traditions about Krsnānanda's religious life have also been quoted in the work. In connection with the date of Krsnānanda Āgamavāgīśa, Mr. Vasu says (loc. cit.), 'Kṛsnānanda, Śrīcaitanya and Raghunātha Śiromani were co-students at the Catuspāthī of the same Guru at Navadvīpa. At first Kṛsnānanda and Caitanya were great friends; but dissension separated them when Caitanya preferred to worship Kṛsna according to the principle known as the Sakhī-bhāva. Kṛṣnānanda requested his friend not to take up the new course, but was insulted; and from that time they began to preach the Śākta and Vaisnava doctrines separately. Krsnānanda attained perfection with the Śakti-mantra and conceived and popularized the form of the image of the goddess Kālī.[1] Before this, Kālī was usually worshipped at a Ghata. The Ghaṭa established for the purpose of worshipping the goddess by Kṛṣnānanda at the temple of Āgameśvarī at Navadvīpa still exists and a large number of Śāktas flock to it for worshipping Mahāmāyā.'

The story narrated by Mr. Vasu invites comments. In the first place, we know that Kṛṣnānanda began his work with an adoration to Lord Kṛṣna, identified with Viṣṇu (Tantrasāra, Vangavāsī edition, p. 1).

[1] According to a tradition recorded by Vasu, Krsnānanda was ordered by the goddess Kālī in a dream to popularize the form of her image. On being questioned as to how the form could be realized, the goddess replied that it would be revealed to the devotee the next morning. Early next day when Krsnānanda came out of his house, he found a young cowherdess engaged in preparing cowdung cakes. She was standing in the ālīdha pose (with the right knee thrown to front and the left leg firm behind in a slanting position) and had a large ball of cowdung in her left hand and a small one in the right, upraised to be set on a wall in the form of a cake. On the sudden consciousness of her being noticed by Krsnānanda the woman felt very much ashamed and pressed her tongue, that lolled, with her teeth (cf. Bengali লজ্জায় জিব কাটা which gives an expression to the feeling of shame). The appearance of the cowherdess as seen by Krsnānanda that morning was popularized by him as the form of the image of Daksina-Kālī. Krsnānanda began to worship small images of this type made of mud by himself every day to be immersed early next morning in the waters of the Ganges. Later the king of Navadvīpa introduced the worship of large images of the same type on the newmoon of the month of Kārttika.

This seems to show that Kṛṣṇānanda Āgamavāgīśa was not initiated into the Śakti-mantra, but was a Tantric devotee who received his initiation into the Vaiṣṇava formula.[1] In the Śyāmā or Kālī section of the Tantrasāra, the author quotes the opinions of various Tantra works, but does not express any special view of his own (cf. op. cit., p. 472ff; also Pūrnānanda's Śyāmārahasya, ed. R. N. Chatterji, pp. 11-12).

In the second place, it is extremely difficult to regard Kṛṣṇānanda Āgamavāgīśa as a co-student of the celebrated Vaiṣṇava saint Caitanya of Navadvīpa and the great Bengali logician Raghunātha Śiromani. Caitanya was born on the full-moon day of Phālguna in Śaka 1407, corresponding to the 18th February, 1486 A.D., and died at the age of 48 on the seventh tithi of the bright half of Āsāḍha in Śaka 1455 (1533 A.D.). Vide D. C. Sen, Vaṅgabhāṣā O Sāhitya, 5th edition, pp. 256, 266; R. G. Bhandarkar's Collected Works, Vol. IV, pp. 118-19. According to the History of Indian Logic (pp. 463–65) by S. C. Vidyabhushan, Raghunātha Śiromani flourished between 1477 and 1547 A.D., although recent writers on the subject suggest that the Śiromani was born about 1460–65 A.D., composed his famous Tattvacintāmanidīdhiti about 1490–1500 A.D. and was therefore about a generation earlier than Caitanya (cf. V.S.P.P., Vol. L, p. 13, LIII, pp. 1, 3). If, therefore, the story narrated by Mr. Vasu has to be believed, we have to assume that Krsnānanda was born about 1480 A.D. and died sometime about the middle of the sixteenth century. There is, however, evidence to show that the Tantrasāra was composed several years after 1577 A.D.

The great Tantric teacher Pūrnānanda Paramahamsa, who was an inhabitant of the Mymensing District of Bengal (cf. Introduction to the Calcutta Sanskrit Series edition of the Śrītattvacintāmani), wrote his famous work entitled Śrītattvacintāmaṇi in the Śaka year 1499 corresponding to 1577 A.D. This is clear from the following passage of the work: श्रीमत्परमहंस-परिव्राजक-श्रीगुरु-ब्रह्मानन्द-मुखारविन्द-निस्यन्दमान-परमरहस्यातिरहस्य-निगममकरन्द-सन्दोहतुन्दिलानन्दः श्रीपूर्णानन्दपरमहंसः श्रीतत्त्वचिन्तामणिं चतुर्दशशताधिकनवनवतिशकाब्दे वितनोति । The Śrītattvacintāmani by Pūrnānanda has been quoted by Krsnānanda Āgamavāgīśa in his Tantrasāra (p. 155). Now even if Pūrnānanda and Kṛṣnānanda were contemporaries, it is difficult to believe that in that age, when there was little facility of communication, Kṛṣnānanda of Navadvīpa in the Nadia District could have information about the work of Pūrṇānanda of Mymensing and secure a copy of it immediately after its composition. The Tantrasāra thus does not appear to have been composed much earlier than circa 1600 A.D. If, under the circumstances, it is conjectured that the Tantrasāra was written by Kṛṣnānanda when he was more than hundred years old, the story of Kṛsnānanda, Caitanya and Raghunātha Śiromaṇi having been co-students under the same Guru may not be altogether impossible. But such a suggestion, if not wholly absurd, is certainly rather improbable. It can hardly be accepted without any corroborative evidence. The Tantrasāra

[1] That Krsnānanda was not anti-Vaisnava is even admitted by a tradition recorded by Vasu, according to which Śākta Kṛṣnānanda had a brother named Sahasrākṣa who was a Vaisnava. One day a number of bananas, preserved by Krsnānanda with a view to offering them to the goddess Āgameśvarī (Kālī), was, during his absence, dedicated by Sahasrāksa to his own tutelary deity, the god Kṛsna-Visnu. At this Krsnānanda became very much annoyed. But when at night the Āgamavāgīśa was worshipping the goddess, he and his Vaisnava brother, who happened to be near him, noticed with surprise that the goddess had Gopāla (child Krsna) on her lap and was feeding him with bananas like a mother. Thereafter the two brothers realized that there was really no difference between the Vaisnava and Śākta forms of worship.

also quotes Rāghava Bhaṭṭa (loc. cit., p. 16 et passim), who wrote the Padārthādarśa commentary on the Śāradātilaka and flourished in 1493-94 A.D., and the Tantrakaumudī (loc. cit., p. 374) composed by the Maithila Devanātha at the court of king Malladeva Naranārāyana of Kamta (1555–87 A.D.; cf. Pravāsī, 1354 B.S., pp. 507-08).

In the preface to the Kālīkhaṇḍa or Section I of the Śaktisaṅgama Tantra, published in the Gaekwad Oriental Series, Dr. B. Bhattacharya has made an attempt to determine the date of the composition of the Śaktisaṅgama and has incidentally discussed the date of the Tantrasāra by Kṛṣṇānanda Āgamavāgīśa. Dr. Bhattacharya says that Krsnānanda, author of the Tantrasāra, was a disciple of Pūrṇānanda Paramahaṃsa, author of the Śrītattvacintāmaṇi. As the preceptor, i.e. Pūrṇānanda, wrote his work in 1577 A.D., the disciple, i.e. Kṛṣṇānanda, in Dr. Bhattacharya's opinion, may have composed his Tantrasāra about thirty years later, that is to say, about 1607 A.D. Unfortunately however the suggestion that the author of the Tantrasāra was a disciple of that of the Śrītattvacintāmani is absolutely unwarranted.

It is well known that Tantric devotees regard the Guru or preceptor as equal or even superior to all the gods as an object of veneration. Kṛṣṇānanda himself quotes the following verse in praise of the Guru from the Jñānārnava Tantra in his Tantrasāra (p. 2):

गुरुः पिता गुरुर्माता गुरुर्देवो गुरुर्गतिः ।
शिवे रुष्टे गुरुस्त्राता गुरौ रुष्टे न कश्चन ॥

In this connection, the attention of scholars may be drawn to the views of various Tantra works quoted in the Guru-śisya-Prakarana of the Prāṇatoṣaṇī Tantra (Vasumatī edition, pp. 91–103), especially to the following citations from the Guru Tantra and the Guptasādhana Tantra (cf. ibid., pp. 94-95):

न गुरोरधिकं शास्त्रं न गुरोरधिकं तपः ।
न गुरोरधिकं मन्त्रो न गुरोरधिकं फलम् ॥
न गुरोरधिका देवी न गुरोरधिकः शिवः ।
न गुरोरधिका मूर्तिर्न गुरोरधिको जपः ॥

(गुरुतन्त्र)

गुरुर्ब्रह्मा गुरुर्विष्णुर्गुरुर्देवो महेश्वरः ।
गुरुस्तीर्थं गुरुर्यज्ञो गुरुर्दानं गुरुर्जपः ॥
गुरुरग्निर्गुरुः सूर्यः सर्वं गुरुमयं जगत् ॥

(गुप्तसाधनतन्त्र)

The section from Pūrṇānanda's Śrītattvacintāmaṇi quoted above, in which the author introdutes himself as a disciple of another Tantrācārya named Brahmānanda Paramahamsa, demonstrates very clearly how much respectfully a Tantric devotee is expected to refer to his Guru. In his Śyāmārahasya Pūrṇānanda refers to himself as श्रीगुरुपादपद्मपरामोदामृतसाविताः पूर्णानन्दगिरिः । There is a distinct injunction as regards the mention of one's preceptor in the Kulārṇava Tantra from which the following verses have been quoted in the Prāṇatoṣaṇī Tantra (p. 103):

श्रीगुरुं कुलशास्त्राणि पूजास्थानानि यानि च ।
भक्त्या श्रीपूर्वकं देवि प्रणम्य च प्रकीर्तयेत् ॥
गुरुं नाम्ना न भाषेत जपकालादृते प्रिये ।
श्रीनाथदेवस्वामीति विवादे साधने वदेत् ॥

It is very interesting to note in this connection that the following lines of the Tantrasāra (p. 489) attributes a particular view to Pūrnānanda Paramahaṃsa and refutes it categorically:

पूर्णानन्दमतेन लक्षजपे पुरश्चरणं; तत् सन्दिग्धमतं; नानातन्त्रे लक्षहृदयदर्शनात् लक्षहृदयेनैव पुरश्चरणं सिद्धमिति ।[1]

If Pūrṇānanda had been the preceptor of the author of the Tantrasāra, he would not certainly have been mentioned in the above passage merely as Pūrṇānanda but would have been called at least Śrī-Pūrṇānanda (if living).[2] This non-reverential reference to the author of the Śrītattvacintāmaṇi in the Tantrasāra shows beyond doubt that Kṛṣṇānanda Āgamavāgīśa was not a disciple of Pūrṇānanda Paramahamsa.

On the title page as well as in the introduction (p. 21) of the Vasumatī edition of the Prāṇatoṣaṇī Tantra, its author Rāmatoṣaṇa Vidyālaṅkāra is represented as the vṛddhaprapautra or great-great-grandson of Kṛṣṇānanda Āgamavāgīśa author of the Tantrasāra. Curiously enough the book itself proves clearly that the statement is wrong. Vasu's statement (loc. cit.) that the author of the book represents himself as the grandson of Sātu Ācārya seems also to be wrong. It is well known to the students of Tantra literature that Rāmatosaṇa's work was prepared and published under the patronage of Bābu Prāṇakṛṣṇa Viśvāsa of Khardaha near Calcutta, who was a great patron of Sastric learning. The author calls his work a latā (vallī, etc.) or creeper styled Prāṇa-toṣaṇī wherein parts of the names of both himself and his patron were cleverly accommodated. In a large number of passages in the work, Rāmatosaṇa refers to his indebtedness to Prāṇakṛṣṇa as well as to the latter's qualities, laudable activities and family relations. In many passages he also speaks of himself and his family. The following passage (p. 147):

श्रीप्राणकृष्णकृतिरस्य निदेशवर्ती
मैत्रेयवंशजकुलाश्रितचक्रवर्ती । etc.

says that Rāmatoṣaṇa Vidyālaṅkāra belonged to a Vaṃśaja (non-Kulin) family of the Maitreyas of the Vārendra Brāhmaṇa community. Elsewhere (p. 77) he refers to his father Kṛṣṇamaṅgala Vidyāvāgīśa and his mother Gaṅgādevī:

कृष्णमङ्गलविद्यावागीशसूनुः सतां मुदे
गङ्गादेवीसुतोऽकार्षीद्ग्रन्थकाण्डं द्वितीयकम् ॥

---

[1] Cf. ibid., p. 488: अस्य पुरश्चरणं लक्षजपश्च पूर्णानन्दमतेन । The reference is to Ch. v of Pūrnānanda's Śyāmārahasya which was composed later than his Śrītattvacintāmani (1577 A.D.). The mention of Pūrṇānanda and the Śrītattvacintāmaṇi is noticed in the old and complete manuscripts of the Tantrasāra including one said to be copied in 1658 A.D. (probably during the author's lifetime).

[2] Sometimes the Guru's name (if he was dead) was mentioned without honorific expressions when he was clearly said to have been one's preceptor: cf. tripurānandena mad-gurunā vyākhyātam in Brahmānanda's Tārārahasya.

In another passage (p. 105) Rāmatosana speaks of his elder brother Rāmalocana Vidyābhūsaṇa who is said to have been the author of a commentary on the Vāstuyāga entitled Vāstuyāgapradīpikā; cf.

मदग्रजरामलोचनविद्याभूषणकृत-वास्तुयागप्रदीपिकाधृतहयग्रीषपञ्चरात्रे, etc.

There are several passages referring to Krsnānanda Āgamavāgīśa, author of the Tantrasāra, as a distinguished member of the family to which Rāmatoṣaṇa belonged; cf.

अस्मद्गोष्ठीगरिष्ठकृष्णानन्दागमवागीशेन स्वकृततन्त्रसारे सर्वं लिखितम् (p. 104);

अस्मद्गोष्ठीगरिष्ठकृष्णानन्दागमवागीशेन स्वकृततन्त्रसारग्रन्थे लिखितं (p. 143).

It is evident that the Āgamavāgīśa was an ancestor of the author of the Prāṇatoṣaṇī Tantra. Fortunately, however, there are some sections of the work which clearly define the relationship between Krsnānanda and Rāmatosaṇa and says that the former was the latter's atyativṛddhaprapitāmaha, i.e. great-grandfather's great-grandfather; cf.

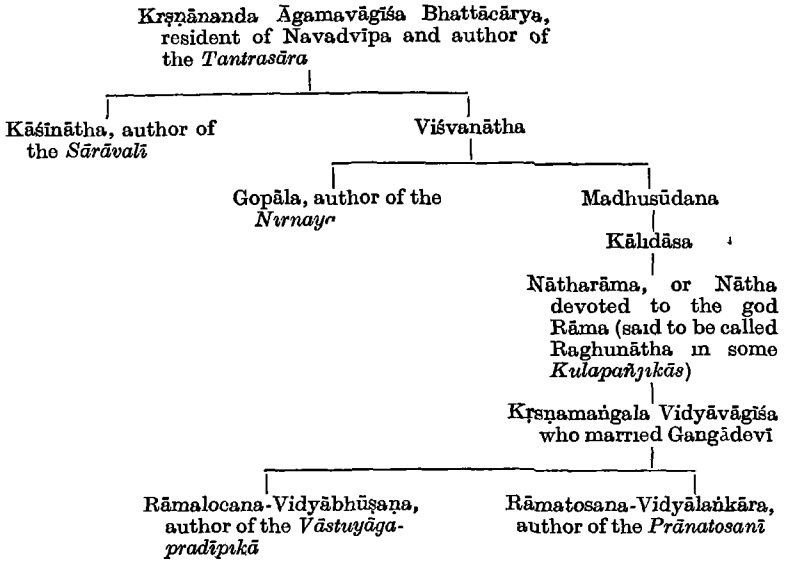

अस्मदत्यतिवृद्धप्रपितामह-कृष्णानन्दागमवागीशेन तन्त्रसारे लिखिते (p. 116);

अस्मदत्यतिवृद्धप्रपितामह-सहृदयगोष्ठीगरिष्ठ-कृष्णानन्दागमवागीश-भट्टाचार्यैः स्वकृततन्त्रसारे लिखितम् (p. 75).

Rāmatosana was therefore the atyativṛddhaprapautra, i e. great-grandson's great-grandson, of Krsnānanda Āgamavāgīśa Bhaṭṭācarya and certainly not the latter's vṛddhaprapautra or great-grandson as asserted by the editor of the Vasumatī edition of the Prānatosanī Tantra. There is moreover a detailed genealogy in the work (p. 146) which makes the relation between the author of the Prāṇatoṣaṇī and that of the Tantrasāra absolutely clear.

Cf. धीमान् श्रीमान् भुवनविदिततन्त्रसारस्य कर्ता

From the above details as well as those quoted before, the following genealogy of the Maitra or Maitreya family, to which Krsnānanda and Rāmatosaṇa belonged, may be prepared and offered in a tabular form:

In the Vārendra-Brāhmana-Vivaraṇa (p. 161) by the late Mr. N N. Vasu there is a genealogical table of the Maitras of Maṇḍalajānī which slightly differs from the one quoted above. Although the details supplied by Rāmatosana in his Prānatoṣaṇī appear to be authoritative, it has been suggested (Pravāsī, B S. 1354, p 506) that the Sārāvalī and the Nirṇaya have been wrongly ascribed to Kāśīnātha and Gopāla respectively. Another mistake of Rāmatosana has been pointed out by quoting the following verse of Gopāla-Pañcānana's Tantradīpikā (MS.):

आगमवागीशपौत्रेण हरिनाथस्य सूनुना ।
श्रीगोपालेन विज्ञेन कृतेयं तन्त्रदीपिका ॥ (loc. cit.)

which is said to be supported by the Kulapañjikās. It will not be out of place to quote the corresponding portion of Mr. Vasu's table (said to be quoted from Yādava Cakravartin's Kulaśāstradīpikā) for easy reference and to point to the interesting fact that most of the names in the family exhibit Vaisṇava influence none of them being typically Śākta.

It will be seen that Kṛṣṇānanda, author of the Tantrasāra, was the seventh in ascent from Rāmatosana, author of the Prāṇatoṣaṇī, in the family. If, as is usual, a period of twenty-five years is counted for each generation, Krsnānanda has to be placed about 150 years before the time of Rāmatosana. The date of the composition of the Prāṇatoṣaṇī is given in the work (p. 3) as: शाके नेत्रयुगाद्रिकाश्यपिमितेऽतीतेऽक्षयायान्तिथौ, that is to say, the akṣayā tithi (probably the akṣaya-tṛtīyā or the third tithi of the bright half of Vaiśākha) in the Śaka year 1742 (1820 A.D.). That the book was printed and published shortly before the 29th of Kārttika of the Bengali San 1231, corresponding to the 13th of November, 1824, is known from the Samācāradarpaṇa of that date cited by B. N. Banerji in his Saṃvāda-patre Sekāler Kathā, Vol. I, p. 60.[1] If then Rāmatoṣana composed his Prāṇatoṣaṇī in 1820 A.D., it seems that his seventh ancestor Krsnānanda wrote his Tantrasāra about 1670 A.D.

In the preface to the Vaṅgavāsī edition of the Tantrasāra, the late Pandit Pañcānana Tarkaratna says that amongst various manuscripts of the work utilized in preparing the text of the above edition, one belonging to Pandit Haripada Smṛtitīrtha, Professor of the Mulajor Sanskrit College, was found to have been copied in Śaka 1580 which would correspond to 1658 A.D. A recent note published in the Pravāsī, B.S. 1354, pp. 506–08, speaks of certain manuscripts of the Tantrasāra believed to be copied in Śaka 1601 (1679 A.D.), Śaka 1568 (1646 A D.) and Śaka 1554 (1632 A.D.). These dates can be accepted only after careful examination. I had the opportunity of examining only the third of these manuscripts in the library of the Vaṅgīya Sāhitya Parisat and find that the third figure of the year supposed to be Śaka 1554 is extremely doubtful. In any case, however, there is no doubt that the Tantrasāra was composed by the great Krsnānanda Āgamavāgīśa Bhattācarya sometime in the seventeenth century. It may not be improbable that Kṛsnānanda flourished in circa 1595–1675 A.D. and composed the Tantrasāra in the earlier part of his life.

APPENDIX VI

Śiva and Śakti in the Orthodox Indian Pantheon.

The age covered by the composition of the Rgvedic hymns is considerably wide (between circa 1400 B.C and 1000 B.C.). It is therefore no wonder, considering the popularity of the union of Aryan males with non-Aryan females, that the speech as well as the social and religious life of the Aryan peoples began to be modified as early as that age.[1] Attention

[1] Cf. 'The ideas of Karma and transmigration, the practice of Yoga, the religious and philosophical ideas centering round the conception of the divinity as Śiva and Devī and as Visnu, the Hindu ritual of Pūjā as opposed to the Vedic ritual of Homa—all these and much more in Hindu religion and thought would appear to be non-Aryan in origin; a great deal of Puranic and epic myth, legend and semi-history is pre-Aryan; much of our material culture and social and other usages, e g. the cultivation of some of our most important plants like rice and some vegetables and fruits like the tamarind and the cocoanut, etc , the use of the betel-leaf in Hindu life and ritual, most of our popular religions, most of our folk crafts, our nautical crafts, our distinctive Hindu dress (the Dhotī and the Sādī), our marriage in some parts of India with the use of vermilion and turmeric—and many other things—would appear to be legacy from our pre-Aryan ancestors' (S. K. Chatterji, Indo-Aryan and Hindi, p. 31) 'The Austric tribes of India appear to have belonged to more than one group of the Austro-Asiatic section—to the Kol, to the Khasi and to the Mon-Khmer groups They were in the neolithic stage of culture and perhaps in India they learned the use of copper and iron. They brought with them a primitive system of agriculture in which a digging stick (lag, lang, ling—various forms of an old word lak*) was employed to till the hillside. Terrace cultivation of rice on hills, and plains cultivation of the same grain were in all likelihood introduced by them. They brought, as the names from their language would suggest, the cultivation of the cocoanut (nārikela), the plantain (kadala), the betel vine (tāmbula), the betel-nut (guvāka), probably also turmeric (haridrā) and ginger (śrngavera), and some vegetables like the brinjal (vātingana) and the pumpkin (alābu). They appear not to have been cattle-breeders—they had no use for milk, but they were the first people to tame the elephant, and to domesticate the fowl. The habit of counting by twenties in some parts of North India (cf. Hindi kodī, may be drawn in this connection to the borrowing of the cerebral consonantal sounds from non-Aryan speech, to the speedy modification of the Ṛgvedic god Rudra and to the germ of theism, a non-Aryan institution later completely absorbed in Indian (i.e. mixed Aryo-aboriginal) religious life, to be traced possibly in the reference in the Ṛgveda (I, 22, 20) to the Śūris (meaning 'sectarian devotees of the god Viṣnu' according to later works) as a class favoured by Viṣnu. It is, however, interesting to note that, while the pre-Aryan Father-god was in the process of amalgamation with Aryan Rudra even in the early Vedic period, the absorption of the pre-Aryan Mother-goddess in the orthodox Indian religious life of later days took a considerably longer period of time.

The objects unearthed at the prehistoric (circa 2750 B.C.) sites of the Indus Valley prove the prevalence of the cult of the Father-god and Mother-goddess among the pre-Aryan peoples of India. The Mohenjodaro people worshipped a male god who may be regarded as the proto-type of Śiva. He is represented as seated in the Yoga posture, surrounded by animals, and has three visible faces with two horns on two sides of a tall head-dress. The ithyphallic (ūrdhva-liṅga) characteristic is also very marked. This apparently explains the later conception of Śiva as a Yogin, styled Paśupati, his Liṅga being specially important and his special attributes being the three eyes and the trident, probably associated respectively with the three faces and the two horns together with the head-dress. Some stone pieces looking exactly like the Śiva-liṅga have actually been discovered at Mohenjodaro. The Liṅga of the Father-god or Creator was worshipped apparently as a symbol not only of creation but also of virility. See Banerjea, Dev. H. Icon., pp. 174ff.

The objects found at Mohenjodaro include many figurines of the Mother-goddess and point to the wide prevalence of her cult. Such figurines, discovered from prehistoric as well as later sites in different parts of India, are usually nude, but wear a peculiar head-dress, a wide girdle and a quantity of jewellery. A prehistoric terracotta seal from Harappa contains a representation of the same goddess who is shown upside down with her legs wide apart and a plant issuing from her womb and with a pair of tigers (cf the association of the lion with the Indian Mother-goddess) towards the left, standing facing each other. The fundamental idea of the Mother-goddess cult was the belief in a female energy as the source of all creation The Indus valley people appear to have also worshipped the Yoni as the symbol of this goddess just as they adored the Liṅga of the Father-god Certain objects discovered at Mohenjodaro have their upper and lower surfaces undulating, while in some others the lower surface is flat but the upper one takes a quatre-foil form Marshall regards these as representations of the Yoni, the female organ of generation symbolizing motherhood and fecundity. Yoni-rings of later date have been found from other sites. Certain disc-like objects, usually with well-carved decorative designs, have been found at old sites like Taxila and Rajghat and have been associated with the Yoni cult. See op. cit., pp. 183ff.

Bengali kudi, 'score, twenty' from the Austric) appears to be the relic of an Austro-Asiatic habit. The later Hindu practice of computing time by days of the moon (tithis) seems also to be Austric in origin' (op. cit., pp. 30-31). The 'notion of Brahman, the Supreme Spirit beyond the conception of the manifest gods, dwelling in the void by itself and creating the world out of itself, through its will or desire, can be looked upon as an Austric contribution in the evolution of Indian thought' (Chatterji in Bhāratakaumudī, I, p. 206). India's script and architecture and the caste system are also pre-Aryan. For the contributions of the non-Aryans to Indian culture, see also Pre-Aryan and Pre-Dravidian in India, ed. P. C. Bagchi, Calcutta, 1929.

The Ṛgveda (VII, 21, 5; X, 99, 3) refers in a deprecatory manner to a class of people called Śiśnadeva. Whether they were Aryan (under the influence of an aboriginal cult) or non-Aryan in origin cannot be determined; but there is no doubt that at least the orthodox section of the Ṛgvedic Aryans disapproved of the phallic cult. The Ṛgvedic Rudra (literally, 'the howling one'), essentially the spirit of stormy clouds, was conceived as discharging brilliant shafts and killing men and cattle with his weapons as well as with diseases (I, 114; VII, 46). The giver of diseases was sometimes also regarded as the healer of them (I, 43, 4, etc.). Rudra's interesting epithet Paśupa (I, 114, 9) seems to point to his rapprochement with the pre-Aryan deity worshipped at Mohenjodaro even as early as the later Ṛgvedic age when some people also spoke of his 'universal sovereignty' (VII, 46, 20). In the Śatarudrīya section of the Yajurveda (Taittirīya, 4, 5, 1; Vājasaneyi, 16), Rudra's benign form is distinguished from his malignant appearance and he is called the heavenly physician, the god lying on the mountains (Giriśa), the wearer of matted hair (Kapardin), and the lord of paths, forests, cattle, forest-tribes and outcasts, thieves and robbers. He is also called Śarva (archer), Bhava (benign), Śambhu (beneficent), Śiva (auspicious) and the wearer of tiger-skin. Thus the conception of a terrible destroyer as quite its opposite resulted from partially an attempt at appeasement by flattery and partially perhaps from his gradual amalgamation with the pre-Aryan Father-god. The Rudras, in the plural, are called Gana (a tribe) and leaders of tribes (Gaṇapati) and of workmen, potters, cartmen, carpenters and Niṣādas who belonged to proto-Australoid forest-tribes. The Atharvaveda (cf IV, 28; VI, 93, 2; VII, 87, 1; XI, 2, 1, XV, 5) refers to Bhava (called Rājan, the archer and the protector of the Vrātyas or outcasts), Paśupati, Ugra, Rudra, Mahādeva and Īśāna as distinct forms of the god. Śarva and Bhava, called Bhūtapati and Paśupati, are desired to remove their deadly poison to other places. In the Śūlagava sacrifice mentioned in the Gṛihyasūtras (Āśvalāyana, 4, 9), a bull was sacrificed to appease Rudra outside the limits of a village. This shows that the god was not exactly within the orthodox pantheon apparently owing to his association with non-Aryan tribes. He is called by the names Hara, Mṛḍa, Bhīma and Śaṅkara, and one is directed to adore Rudra at the time of traversing a path and a crossing of four roads, of passing by a heap of dung and a creeping serpent, of being overtaken by a tornado and of coming to a variegated scene, a sacrificial site and an old tree (Hiranyakeśin, 1, 5, 16; cf. Pāraskara, III, 15). The Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad (cf. Chs III–IV), which is earlier than the Bhagavadgītā (circa third century B.C) and contains speculations approaching closely the Bhakti cult of later days, calls the god Bhagavat, the Great Soul and also Maheśvara in whose power stands Māyā and Prakṛti. It is also said that, knowing Śiva who is minuter than the minute, the creator and protector of the universe, the one having many forms and the one alone encompassing the world and concealed in all beings, men (Brahmarṣis) become free from all nooses and attain eternal peace. The god is further said to be the one unchangeable principle that existed before creation. The earliest exposition of the Pāśupata doctrine is found in the Atharvaśiras Upaniṣad (cf. R. G. Bhandarkar, Vaiṣnavism, etc., p 159) which is, however, not a very ancient work. The Śiva-bhāgavatas of Patañjali's Mahābhāṣya (originally composed in the second century B.C.), under Pāṇini, V, 2, 76, were apparently followers of the Pāśupata-vrata mentioned in this Upaniṣad. Thus the pre-Aryan Father-god, amalgamated with Vedic Rudra, gradually came to be, as Rudra-Śiva, a great force in the composite religious life of India long before the birth of Christ, although even in later times often his non-Aryan origin and association were remembered and pointedly mentioned (cf. the legend about the destruction of Daksa's sacrifice, supra, p. 6). This shows that the influence of Śiva, worshipped by the pre-Aryans, was strong enough to overcome the reluctance of the orthodox Aryan element and to occupy a front seat in the Indo-Aryan pantheon in spite of opposition.

The pre-Aryans appear to have conceived the Mother-goddess as the wife of the Father-god; but, in the Vedic literature, the Mother-goddess is rarely referred to.[1] The Yajurveda (cf. Taittirīya, I, 8, 6) mentions Ambikā as Rudra's sister. In connection of the Śūlagava sacrifice in honour of Rudra, the Gṛhyasūtras speak of the 'wife of Bhava' (Hiranyakaśin, II, 3, 8) apparently as a subordinate deity. Sometimes Rudrānī, Śarvānī and Bhavānī are mentioned side by side (Pāraskara, III, 8). The Kena Upaniṣad gives a story in which Umā Haimavatī (daughter of the Himavat) disclosed the nature of Brahman (probably Śiva) to the gods (cf. R. G. Bhandarkar, op. cit., p. 158). But she is not called Rudraśiva's wife. Ambikā's mention as Rudra's spouse in the interpolated tenth section of the Taittirīya Āranyaka (X, 18) is of course very late. Thus in the age covered by the Vedic literature, when the non-Aryan Father-god was considerably near the front rank in the orthodox Indian pantheon, the worship of the Mother-goddess does not appear to have been popular with the higher classes of the society. Even if she made any progress towards recognition, that was possibly as a subordinate to her husband Śiva. This may have been due mainly to the fact that the cult of the Mother-goddess as such was originally unknown to the Aryans who were moreover a patrilineal people unlike the matrilineal aboriginals. Even in the early centuries of the Christian era when the Liṅga cult was becoming widely popular among the people of different classes (although the phallic emblems were gradually being made symbolical by removing their earlier realistic character which was apparently disliked by the orthodox) and when the appearance of Ommo (Umā from the Dravidian Amma meaning the universal mother) on the coin of Huviska proves that the Mother-goddess cult became an important factor in Indian religious life, Śakti seems to have been subordinated to Śiva by the upper classes of people who moreover practically ignored the worship of Yoni as the symbol of the Mother-goddess. Certain tirthas containing Yoni tanks are no doubt mentioned in the Mahābhārata; but the worship of Yoni is prescribed only in the late-medieval Tantra[2] works which were also not favoured universally by all classes of the society. This particular cult was specially disliked by the orthodox upper classes.

[1] Her influence is slightly noticed in the conception of Vedic Aditi (spirit of the boundless sky), described as the mighty mother of the Ādityas and as associated with Daksa. See Macdonell, Ved. Myth, sect. 41. But she is a minor deity of the Vedic pantheon and was gradually forgotten with the development of the Dākṣāyaṇī-Haimavatī conception of the Mother-goddess.

Śiva in his anthropomorphic form such as on the pre-Christian Ujjain coins and on those of Gondophernes and the Kusānas belonging to the first and second centuries A.D. (the ithyphallic characteristic of Śiva or Harihara being apparent on a coin of Huviṣka), the discovery from all parts of India of innumerable symbolical phallic emblems of Śiva dating from about the beginning of the Gupta age (although certain realistically made Liṅgas such as that of Gudimallam and their representation on coins such as those from Ujjain have been assigned to dates prior to the beginning of the Christian era), the description of an exceptionally large number of Indian rulers of all parts of the country as exclusive devotees of Maheśvara or Śiva in records dating from the first century A.D. (cf. Sel. Ins., I, pp. 125, 331, 387, 394, 419f., etc.), the mention of ten generations of Pāśupata ācāryas in a Mathurā inscription of 381 A.D. (ibid., pp. 269ff.) and the evidence of the epics and the Purānas show beyond doubt that Śiva's status at least in the early centuries of the Christian era was practically the same as it is today in the religious life of India. See Dev. H. Icon., Chs. IV-V. But the case of Śakti, in spite of her growing popularity with different classes of people as suggested by Huviska's coin, seems to have been different. The evidence of certain later sections of the Mahābhārata and the Purāṇas like the Mārkaṇḍeya no doubt shows that the Mother-goddess, conceived as the wife of Śiva, was nearing the front rank about the age of the imperial Guptas. But even in the period following this age we very often find her associated and apparently subordinated to Śiva. Attention may be drawn in this connection to the adoration of Kāmeśvara and Mahāgaurī in the early-medieval records of some kings of Kāmarūpa (Kāmarūpaśāsanāvalī, Intro., p. 32) where the most important deity was no doubt Kāmākhyā (Mahāgaurī). Interesting is also Hiuen Tsang's mention of Bhīmādevī of Gandhāra in association with Mahādeva worshipped by the Tīrthikas or Pāśupatas It is well known that the Kāpālika sect of the Śaivas worshipped Śakti in association with Śiva (supra, p. 10, note 1). It is also to be noted that the Śūlkīs of Orissa, although their family-deity was Stambheśvarī, claimed to have been exclusively devoted to Maheśvara (D. R. Bhandarkar, List, Nos. 1697-98, 1700). The very name of the goddess shows that she was made out on a Stambha indicating a Liṅga (such Liṅgas with the representation of Śaktis being found in Eastern India; cf. Hist. Beng., I, p. 452) and was thus subordinate to Śiva. A king of the Bhañja family of Orissa claims to have obtained boons from the goddess Stambheśvarī although he was a worshipper of Viṣṇu personally (List, No. 1493) There are similar other references to the worship (usually and especially by the aboriginals) of particular forms of the Mother-goddess; cf. Vindhyavāsinī mentioned in the Harivaṃśa (circa fourth century A.D.) and Vākpatirāja's Gaüdavaha (eighth century). Jālandhara (Jvālāmukhī), Uḍḍiyāna (in the Swat valley), Kāmarūpa, Śrīhaṭṭa and Pūrnagiri were regarded as the greatest seats of the Mother-goddess in works dating from the eighth century (supra, pp. 12ff.). Śiva was, however, usually worshipped along with the Mother-goddess in such seats (Pīṭhas) in a form styled Bhairava [1] But the gradual increase in the importance of the Mother-goddess is also sometimes noticed as suggested by her independent installation for worship (cf also supra, p 10, note 1, l. 7). In the fifth century A.D., the Maukhari chief Anantavarman established the images of Bhūtapati and Devī in a cave in the Nagarjuni hills, while in another cave he installed an image of the Mother-goddess styled Devī, Bhavānī, Kātyāyanī and the one overpowering the demon Mahiṣāsura. It should, however, be remembered that the chief was a worshipper of Śiva and Śakti and not of Śakti alone. The 'Divine Mothers', often associated with Mahāsena as in the records of the early Kadambas and Calukyas, are known to have usually been collectively adored (Bṛhatsaṃhitā, 60, 19). The construction of a temple for them, described as a 'terrible abode, full of Ḍākinīs (female ghouls), of the Mothers who utter loud and tremendous shouts of joy and who stir up the very oceans with the wind rising from the Tantra (magical rites)', by a Vaisnava (the 'Mothers' being subordinate to Viṣnu in this case) royal official for merit, is referred to in a Mandasor inscription of 423 A.D (Sel. Ins., pp. 284f.). For another early temple of the 'Divine Mothers', see the Deogarh-rock inscription of about the sixth century A D (E.I., XVIII, pp 126f.). But whereas the kings of the Gupta age and their successors are usually described as devotees of Maheśvara, Śambhu, Āditya, Sugata, Buddha, Tathāgata, Bhagavat (Viṣnu), Viṣnu, Varāha, Cakrapāni, Narasiṁha, etc., we rarely find kings who were exclusively devoted to the worship of the Mother-goddess before the age of the Gurjara-Pratihāras (eighth to the eleventh century) of Kanauj, among whom Nāgabhaṭa II, Bhoja I and Mahendrapāla I claim to have been devotees of the goddess Bhagavatī (D. R Bhandarkar, op. cit, No. 25), while Mahīpāla had predilections for the worship of that goddess as well as of the sun-god (Tripathi, Hist. Kanauj, pp. 290-91).

Neither Śiva nor Śakti, however, has been free from aboriginal associations even to this day; but the latter bears the stigma in a far more marked degree than the former, although it has of course to be admitted that Śakti is now regarded as one of the Pañcadevatā (Sūrya, Gaṇeśa, Devī, Śiva and Viṣnu) to be worshipped in all ceremonies (Bṛhaddharma P., III, 9, 1). Certain late-medieval Tantras and other works dealing with the Śaiva and Śākta cults (e.g. Annadāmaṅgala, Vangavāsī ed., p. 78) represent Śiva as an ardent lover of Koch girls. This trait, not found in earlier works, no doubt resulted from the identification of Śiva with a tribal deity of the Koch people after their Hinduization in the medieval period; but it shows that Śiva was particularly associated with non-Aryan barbarians even in comparatively modern times. We have already discussed (supra, p. 3, note 2) the contribution of the various non-Aryan elements in the Indian population to the conception of the Indian Mother-goddess as suggested by her names in Indian literature.[1] But the most glaring instance of her barbarian association in late-medieval and recent times is offered by the ceremony called Śabarotsava that was performed on the Daśamī tithi in connection with the autumnal worship of Durgā and is partially remembered in rural Bengal even to this day. The 'festivities on account of the excellent worship of the goddess Umā', celebrated by the people of Varendrī (North Bengal), is referred to by the twelfth century Bengali author Sandhyākaranandin in his Rāmacarita (III, 25).[2] People taking part in the Śabarotsava used to cover their bodies with leaves, etc, and to besmear them with mud and other things in the style of the Śabaras who are a proto-Australoid aboriginal people of south-eastern India. Two verses occurring both in the Kālaviveka (Bib. Ind. ed., p. 514) by the Bengali jurist Jīmūtavāhana (fifteenth century according to Jolly, but eleventh-twelfth century according to Kane, Hist. Dharm., I, pp. 325-26) and in the Kālikā Purāṇa

[1] Names like Kauśikī, Kātyāyanī and Dāksāyaṇī probably indicated deified ladies or deities worshipped by certain Aryan families or clans. See supra, p. 3, note 2.

[2] The oldest reference to the modern Bengali form of the worship of Durgā Mahisamardinī, accompanied by Kārttikeya, Gaṇeśa, Laksmī, and Sarasvatī, is found in the Caṇḍīmangala (16th century).

(61, 21-22)[1] prove that the programme of this festivity included topics on and songs about the sex organs and possibly also about sexual intercourse with requisite movements of the body and that its violation incurred Bhagavati's anger and curse. The Brhaddharma Purāṇa (III, 6, 81-83), a late-medieval Bengal work of about the seventeenth century,[2] introduces some modifications in the above programme when it says, 'People should not utter before others words which are expressive of such things as the male and female organs of generation, they should utter these during the days of the great worship of the goddess in the month of Āśvina. But even then they should never pronounce them before their mothers and daughters and before female disciples who have not yet been initiated to Śakti worship'. Still, however, the Purāṇa supports by arguments that a person worthy of worshipping the Mother-goddess should utter the indecent expressions with a view to pleasing her.[3]

2 The Brahmavaivarta Purāna (I, 10, 18 and 123), an East Indian adaptation of an old work and to be attributed to the fourteenth or fifteenth century (supra, p. 6, note 3), makes a distinction between the Ambasthas (probably the Ambastha-Kāyasthas of Bihar) and the Vaidyas (of Bengal), while the Brhaddharma (III, 14, 38-48) identifies the Vaidyas with the Ambasthas. Similarly, Kavīkanthahāra's Sadvaidyaulapañjikā (1653 A.D.) is silent about the Ambastha origin of the Bengal Vaidyas (cf Dacca ed., pp 1-2), whereas Bharatamallika's Candraprabhā (1675 A.D.) definitely states that the Vaidyas were the same as the ancient Ambasthas (Calcutta ed , p. 4). The present-day Ambasthas of the Tamil land and Malabar (their early distribution in South India may have been wider) appear to be referred to as Vaidyas in inscriptions dating from the seventh century (E I., IX, p 101; VIII, pp. 317-21; XVII, pp. 29 ff ; I A., 1893, pp. 57f.) Their entry into Bengal during the rule of the Senas, hailing from Karnāta or the Kanarese country in the Deccan, is very probable, as the Senas of Bengal must have patronized South Indians in the same way as the Muslim rulers of India entertained Musalmans of other countries at their courts. It is thus very probable that the crystallization of the professional community of the Vaidyas or physicians of Bengal into a caste was a result of their amalgamation with the tribal Ambastha-Vaidyas of Southern India. This seems to have been the background on which the theory identifying the Vaidyas with the Ambasthas of early Indian literature (Manu calling them physicians) was fabricated in the late-medieval period. The above facts would show that the date of the Brhaddharma Purāna is not much earlier than the seventeenth century. The reference to the stories of Kālaketu and Śrīmanta (III, 16, 45) seems to suggest for it more or less the same age as that of Mukundarāma's Candīmaṅgala (sixteenth century). It should also be noted that considerable influence of the late-medieval Tantric literature is discernible in this Purāna (cf. supra, p. 104, note 1).
